DIET AND HEALTH

Raleigh, N. C. May 21—"Of all people, those living in the country should be the most healthful. They should be strong in body and alert in mind. They spend their life mostly in the open air. Their food is the fruits of the soil yielded from the results of their efforts. Many and varied may be their diet. By careful and wise planning the farm will provide food fit to serve the most exacting appetite. Many farm folks enjoy the best of ham and bacon, and have plenty of butter, milk, cream and cottage cheese provided by the family cow," says Dr. J. O. Halverson, Nutrition expert for the State College and Department of Agriculture.

He says "The all-the-year-round garden will furnish salad greens and fresh vegetables, crisp and green, freshly picked. The farmer's wife does not know the wilted and shriveled vegetables familiar to the city women. She has the choicest and freshest of greens and salads to select from.

"Plenty of eggs and poultry provide additional tempting food for the ever-hungry children.

"The berry patches and orchard will furnish the necessary fruits and berries in season. All the family may enjoy luscious strawberries, dewberries, peaches, pears, plums, grapes and apples as they ripen. With some effort, to be sure, the farmer, his wife and children may have the best of meals, the best of fare and this in return will be repaid by good health and good vitality. The youngsters can have the glow of ruddy cheeks. Substantial fare and varied diet furnish muscle and brawn. The father and mother are well-preserved, hale and hearty. Their is the satisfaction and the contentment of having produced something more than a single crop and in not living out of tin cans and small packages."

Trade increases the wealth and glory of a country; but its real strength and stamina are to be looked for among the cultivators of the land.—Lord Chatham.
