

THE RICH GATHER TO CELEBRATE LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY

(By Wallace Bassford). Washington, D. C. Feb. 18.—There was a notable gathering in the great banquet hall of the Waldorf-Astoria the other night in New York. In the great modern Babylon, the vast and wealthy metropolis of a fertile land, hundreds gathered who represented every form of wealth and opulence ever envisioned in the wildest dream of a Croesus or a Midas. There were gathered the members and connections of the houses of Belmont, Mellon, Morgan, Rockefeller, Whitney, Vanderbilt, Astor, and so on down the list. "A thousand bright lamps shone o'er that high festival." They were gathered ostensibly for the purpose of honoring the birthday of Abraham Lincoln, the rail-splitter! In very fact, they were there for the purpose of drawing over and around their myriad diamonds and their coarse wealth the worn homespun mantle of a man of the plain people, a backwoodsman, a patriot, a man who had known what it was to hunger and to suffer, a man who had had no sympathy with them or their kind while he lived, and who would doubtless turn over in his grave if he could know that his name and his faith were being used to blotter up for awhile the sinking fortunes of the party of privilege, of graft, of tax immunity, of special legislative favors; and the party led and managed by a new aristocracy based neither upon blood nor merit, but upon the sordid creed of Big Money. There was feasting and speechmaking, and myriad of flunkies waited on fat men in full dress and highly decorated women covered with diamonds, and Senator Wadsworth, elected to his job because he belonged to the moneyed aristocracy of the State, called up the shade of Lincoln to witness the purity of the party which elected him to the White House many years ago. There is a story in the Bible of how Saul called up the spirit of his departed friend Samuel with sad results, for when the spirit of Samuel arose he told his friend some very unpleasant things. Could the great commoner, Lincoln, have stalked into the assemblage at the Waldorf-Astoria he might have had some caustic comments to make. Could he possibly have recognized his party? Could he have endorsed anything which that party has done in the last forty years? Would he have recognized as a member of his party Mrs. August Belmont, wife of the famous owner of many race-horses, who took a little time from writing checks for organizing the woman vote to read that famous Lincoln speech at Gettysburg. In that speech he seemed to be doubtful if a country based on the simple principles of liberty, equality and justice could long endure. How much more doubtful would he be if he could stand unobserved in a corner of that banquet hall and have pointed out to him the men who now control the destinies of the party which once was his, with a few brief words as to the history and record of this, that and the other one? Could it be that he dimly foresaw this vast change in the control of the Republican party of that older day when he uttered that great hope that government of the people, for the people and by the people might not perish from the earth?

LIVES AND LIMBS SAVED BY CAROLINA STOP LAW

Deaths and injuries from grade crossing accidents showed a marked decline following the enactment of the North Carolina law requiring drivers of motor vehicles to stop before crossing railroad tracks, according to figures just made public by the Safety Department of the Southern Railway System. The law became effective on July 1, 1923, and in the ensuing six months, four persons were killed and eleven injured in eleven accidents at crossings of the Southern's tracks in North Carolina, as against six killed and twenty-four injured in twenty-one accidents during the first six months of 1923, eleven killed and twenty-five injured in eighteen accidents during the last half of 1922, and eight killed and twenty-two injured in fifteen accidents during the first half of 1922. This decrease in casualties was in the face of an increasing volume of automobile and truck travel, 247,612 motor vehicles having been registered in the office of the Secretary of State of North Carolina during 1923 as against 182,060 in 1922.

Overman is Again Dealing in Cotton Futures.

Senator Overman has received a communication from Larry I. Moore, of New Bern, endorsing his position concerning the dealings in cotton futures, and stating that he thinks some regulation should be adopted which would prevent a man selling a commodity which he does not own and does not expect to produce, etc. Senator Overman replied in part: "I am glad you endorsed my position. I think the farmers are absolutely in the hands of these money gamblers in New York, and something should be done to stop it. I don't know what exactly should be done, but I expect to do all I can to have an investigation and see just what is the proper remedy, as there is great need of something being done. As it is now they can lower or raise the price of cotton at their will, and this should not be permitted. I hope the investigation by the federal trade commission will mark the way for some wholesome legislation."

Daily Becoming Less Wearisome to Many in Asheboro.

Mrs. Carl Steed, Salisbury St., Asheboro, says: "My kidneys were weakened by a spell of the measles and always afterward when I took cold it settled right on my kidneys. I would almost get down with backache. I couldn't keep my work up and would often have to stop and rest. When night came I couldn't even sleep as I was in such misery. I became nervous and had dizzy headaches. Doan's Kidney Pills have given me the greatest relief from these attacks. I can always depend on them to stop the backaches, headaches and dizziness and regulate my kidneys."
