

A canvass will be made to get the farmers in Randolph county to join the Cotton Growers' Co-operative marketing association. This State association has done remarkably well since it was organized three years ago. It now has between thirty-five and forty thousand members. In 1922 the association sold more than one hundred and thirty-five thousand bales at $12.50 more a bale on an average than the man who was not a member received for his cotton, after all expenses of handling were paid. They are handling considerably more of the 1923 crop with the prospect for better results. It seems to be the best way for the farmers to market their cotton crop and it is to be hoped that they will all join the association.

Now comes The Christian Science Monitor one of the great newspapers of the country, heralding the praise and power of the country weekly press. This great paper says in part: So it is a matter of no little importance, considering the magnitude of the subject, that the country press of the United States has enlisted wholeheartedly to fight the battle of temperance and law enforcement. The issue will be interesting, if not spectacular. Allied with the destructive liquor interests are many of the larger daily and weekly papers published in the cities. For some reason which the editors and owners of these papers of larger circulation have not publicly disclosed, they have persisted in their effort to discourage a complete enforcement of the prohibition law. Many of them have allotted generous space to news detailing the manner in which the law is violated, and not a few have, by editorial comment, sought to popularize the campaign of nullification.

Now comes the country editor and his thousands of clear-thinking and unprejudiced brethren throughout the length and breadth of the land, ready to defend and uphold the law which it has been sought to destroy. They have no selfish motive in thus enlisting on the side of the right. They are committed to the cause by their realization that the best interests of themselves and of the people and industries which they seek to protect demand that the constitution and the laws be unhesitatingly obeyed. The tainted money of the bootlegger and the brewer has not influenced them to betray the people whose confidence they have gained and desire to keep. They feel a personal responsibility. They are not tempted to sell at any price the friendships of a lifetime.

The inclination is to believe that no evil influence is powerful enough to sway the sentiment of the great mass of voters in the United States against so powerful an ally of national righteousness. It was the strength of the moral forces in the agricultural states that made possible the early enactment of the law which the enemies of society are now seeking to nullify. This same courageous electorate will see to it that no backward step is taken. No editor of a country paper need apologize to his patrons and friends for his stand in support of the law. They are with him just as the loyal and progressive people everywhere are steadfast in support of good government and civic decency.

Mr. W. S. Lineberry of Randolph County First Contributor To Aycock Memorial

Editor of The Courier: I see in your paper of the 12th an account of the unveiling of the monument on Capitol Square, Raleigh, to the late Governor Charles Brantley Aycock, which calls to my mind the fact that I was the first man in N. C. to contribute to that monument. Being a great admirer of him, and for the love I had for him, and believing him to be one of my best friends, on the day of his death I went to the News & Observer office and paid to Josephus Daniels $5.00 towards a fund for a monument to his memory. I have now a receipt for the same. Miss Francis Renfrow, his private secretary, subscribed $5.00 the same day. She was the first lady subscriber.

Wilson ought to be worth much to the faltering faith of those who have been led into the paths of doubt by critics and traducers of the Word of God. In answer to those who would debate, is it not enough to hold up the well-worn Bible of Woodrow Wilson?
