Which?

$50 for Painting

$500 for Repairing

A 1000 per cent Investment

That's the way to look at painting—as an investment, not an expense. Look around you at the houses going to rack and ruin. What is doing it? The weather. There is only one defense against weather and that is paint. But paint, like weather, is of many kinds. Beware of the fair weather paint. It does not protect, it only deceives. Buy a paint that has proved its staying power.

SWP (Sherwin-Williams House Paint, Prepared) has a fifty-year record. Its ingredients are what efficient in protecting property. It puts an armor between your buildings and the elements and also adds beauty and cleanliness.

Health is Wealth

Health is one of the greatest things your family can possess. It brings happiness and success. But health must be safe-guarded by good wholesome foods that are prepared from the purest ingredients. This is especially true of bakings. If they are not properly raised, we all know that they are not easily digested. Many times when self-rising flour is used in place of good plain flour and dependable baking powder—the results are flat, soggy and heavy foods.

Don't take chances! Use a reliable brand of baking powder and plain flour. Then you will be sure of healthful bakings that are easily digested.

Remember, science has never found anything to take the place of the tried and tested method of using plain flour and good baking powder in preparing bakings. Millions of housewives now know by actual experience that many preparations that are claimed to take their place are worthless and dangerous to health because they fail to leaven. There is no comparison.

Calumet, the Economy Baking Powder, is known to be one sure and positive aid to successful bakings that are always pure, sweet and wholesome.

That's the reason its sales are 2 1/2 times as much as any other brand.

Reminiscences and Recollections of the Old Land Mark, the Robins Home, Now Being Replaced by a New House.

The following letter from Mr. William Marsh Sanders, a prominent citizen of Smithfield, Johnson county, who is a grandson of Mr. Alfred H. Marsh, will be of interest to many of our readers. The letter was written by Mr. Sanders to a relative, a citizen of Asheboro, who allows us to print it. The old home, to which reference is made, is the Robins home.

Smithfield, N. C. March 14, 1924. I thank you for The Courier which announces the removal of the old house. This found me in bed, slightly, I hope, indisposed. Of course the dismantling of the old house wherein my grandparents lived for so many years; in which my mother was born and reared, from which she moved upon her marriage to my father, is calculated to give momentary distress to even a man in robust health, but we all must realize that in the course of events such things must come to pass. I am wondering how The Courier arrived at the age of the house?

My mother was born in 1824. I have always understood, in that old home. My grandfather, Mr. Alfred H. Marsh, died there in the year 1865. He had married Sarah Elliott, of Asheboro, in the year 1806, and it seems that he had lived in that same home for 42 years at the time of his death. Five of my grandfather's children were born in this home, including my mother.

I have been told that my grandfather was, for many years, a prosperous merchant of the town of Asheboro. He established one of his sons, William H. Marsh, who had recently graduated at the University at Chapel Hill, in business in Wilmington. His career there was, however, short, as he died suddenly after a year or two residence. His body was brought by friends from Wilmington to High Point, by rail, and from there through the country to Asheboro, arriving about mid-night. The mails in those days were slow and indifferent; there was no telegraphic communication to Asheboro, and the arrival of the body was the first news my grandparents had of the illness and death of their son. I remember hearing my grandfather refer, often, to the shock and grief of that distressing occurrence. I received the impression that he, my deceased Uncle William, was, perhaps, the best loved child of my grandmother. I have, since, been told by his friends that he, William, was one of the universally respected and best loved citizens of Wilmington at the time of his residence there.

In 1864 my mother drove through the country from our old home in Johnson county to Asheboro, one hundred miles. Her family consisted of several small children, at that time, and we were all carried along in the carriage with her. I was then about six years old, but have yet rather positive recollections of some of the events of that trip. Our first stop was near Pittsboro, at the home of my aunt Cornelia, whose husband was the late Mr. George W. Thompson.

On the road, somewhere between Pittsboro and Asheboro, we called at the home of some gentleman, whose family was known to my mother, the name being, I believe, Foust. I remember seeing a young man there riding a fine, big black horse. This was the last year of the Civil war, and we were told by the ladies of this family that some outlaws had robbed their residence a few nights before. Among other depredations committed they had broken into and destroyed a safe, and this safe was made of slate. I remember distinctly seeing some of the shattered slate scattered about the lawn. I have often questioned the accuracy of this childish impression, and have wondered if there was, ever, such a thing in Randolph county as a slate safe. I have never heard of one elsewhere, and it is possible that my childish imagination may have been confused.

We stopped at the home of my great grandfather, Mr. William Marsh and found the old place being cared for by two trusty old slaves. My great grandfather had died ten years previously at the advanced age of more than one hundred and three years. My grandparents were expecting us and upon our arrival in Asheboro we were received with open arms, with the most affectionate, generous and gracious welcome. Their splendid personal appearance, both being tall and handsome, together with their delightful welcome, made an impression that lives vividly yet in my memory. At ten times your mother, who was double first cousin to my mother, called to see us. They had not met since the tragic death of your father; the profound grief of that meeting and the gentle solicitude of my mother for your own mother will abide in my memory forever.

At the conclusion of our visit my grandparents begged that I be left for a time, with them. I was not then aware of such a scheme, but I was left with them and remained in Asheboro until the following year, in August 1888. My grandparents gave me all that love and kindness could suggest, but even so I cried myself to sleep every night. Among other kindly attentions paid to me, I was given a young colored boy, named Dave, for my valet. Dave was a splendid boy, he interested and amused me most successfully while the sun was shining, but when night fell the same my mind and heart longed for my mother.

I remember many things of and about the Ashabero of those days. In April 1888 I remember that a portion of General Johnston's army (probably General Wheeler's cavalry, as I have since learned that this command was there) passed through the town, and a distinguished looking Confederate officer, General Hood, my grandfather's name, and while they were at table I remained with the elderly lady, admiring the horses and arms and equipment. I imagined, for many years, that this officer might have been General Hood, but long after-

A FRENCH LAWYER'S ADDRESS TO A JURY

Gentlemen of the jury, my task is easy. The accused has confessed; a defense is impossible. And yet I want to me all that love and kindness could suggest, but even so I cried myself to sleep every night.
