

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

What Our Field Correspondent Hears and Thinks. Items of Interest Picked Up.

June 7 will settle the fate of all the candidates. Word comes from Lexington that Bruce Talbert, who is a native of Randolph county and who was elected Sheriff of Davidson county in the last election, is making good. Nothing surprising about that, to those who really know him.

High Point through its Chamber of Commerce and community efforts, has made of that town one of the best towns of its size in the country, and the business men here could do the same thing for Asheboro if they only would get busy and work at the job like High Point has done.

If all the time we spent criticizing and gossiping about our neighbors was spent in chopping wood, few of us would have little to worry about when the question of fuel comes up next winter.

Messrs. A. L. Deik, of Jackson Creek, and W. R. Deik, of High Point, have purchased the J. R. Ridge property at Archdale and will move in the near future.

The merchants of Asheboro deserve your patronage because they are all interested in making Asheboro a better place in which to live. It takes money to do anything in a big way. We cannot build large buildings, and make public improvements unless we all pull together. It is a duty we owe to Asheboro to do everything we can that will make it a better city. When you send a dollar away from Asheboro or Randolph county for merchandise that you can buy here, you are merely sending that much money out of circulation forever, so far as you are concerned. Stand by your local merchants and they will always stand by you. Get your friends and neighbors to patronize local industry in every possible way. It will pay big dividends. When you ask a favor of the local merchants you are always sure to be accommodated if you are reasonable in your demands. The local merchants are home boosters. They believe in the future of our city and county, and are ready and willing at all times to support any move that will mean more for the progress and prosperity of the county, city and you. Their prices are not extortionate; they offer their goods at most reasonable prices. In fact their prices are much lower in most instances than those of outside merchants. They have invested large sums of money in Merchandise, trying to anticipate your every need, and if by chance they do not have an article when you call for it, they will endeavor to get it for you. There is no question that those cities which have the greatest measure of commercial and industrial prosperity are the ones in which there is the most complete co-ordination of business and industrial enterprises. Each individual member of the community is expected, and properly so, to support his home doctors, his home dentists, his home lawyers, his home merchants, and on the other hand, these different classes may rightly be expected to give their patronage and their support to those who patronize them, and to the community that provides them with employment. This does not mean that the community shall live unto itself in any narrow sense, but simply that as far as industrial and social needs may be served that service should be secured in Asheboro.

Mr. Ell Leach, who is a county commissioner, was in Asheboro last Saturday. He lives at Seagrove and in his personal work has reflected great credit upon his ability in helping to transact the county's business affairs.

Mr. W. M. Lawrence, of Ramseur, Route 1, is a farmer in this county who raises a quantity of sweet potatoes every year—500 to 1200 bushels—and takes the trouble to bring to market the kind customers want and will buy, cleaned and graded, and his crop sells. He has a potato house that can take care of 2,000 bushels of sweet potatoes. He has sold several fine potatoes on the Asheboro market this spring. A farmer should get the best for whatever he grows, and to compete with the big wholesale merchants he must supply what home-keepers consider best to cook for their

McADOO WILL GET NORTH CAROLINA'S 24 VOTES

Senator Underwood Did Not Enter State Primary. Many Candidates File and Only Few Officers Are Without Opposition For Renomination.

The time for filing notice for candidacy with the state board of elections closed at midnight Saturday. William Gibbs McAdoo will receive North Carolina's 24 votes at the Democratic national convention in New York for the nomination of the president, according to secretary of the board of elections.

Mr. Walter Murphy, state manager for Mr. Underwood, made the announcement that his candidate would not enter the race in North Carolina. The entry of Luther M. Nash, a Goldsboro printer, into the race for Commissioner of Labor and Printing, occasioned surprise on the final filing day.

Only the State Treasurer, the State Commissioner of Revenue, the Superintendent of Education and the Secretary of State are without opposition for renomination, and they will be declared the nominees of the party without submission to the primary. Of the Congressional delegation, Senator F. M. Simmons, Congressman John H. Kerr, C. L. Abernathy, C. M. Steadman, H. L. Lyon, W. C. Hammer, R. L. Doughton and Zebulon Weaver are without opposition.

Republican nominees filed for every office except that of Superintendent of Education, and in the Third Congressional district, where Charles Laban Abernathy is opposed neither within nor without the party. Only one judge of the superior court is up for re-election this year, Judge Midyette being up for the unexpired term to which he was appointed. Senatorial contests are few, most of them being eliminated by agreement in the several districts, confining the voting to counties and not making them accountable to the State Board. A number of entries were returned unlisted.

The First, Fourth and Ninth Congressional districts register contests, with the heat of the battle centering in the First where four men are contending for the seat to be vacated by Congressman Hallett S. Ward. The Fourth and Ninth districts have not yet warmed up, but the First has been campaigning with vigor for months.

A graduate of State College, a practical and successful farmer and orchardist, he has also had considerable legislative experience. Indeed there are no circles in which progress in this State is being promoted that he doesn't know his way about. In addition, he is young enough in years and alert enough in mind to learn something more."

DEATH OF ALLEN L. SKEEN

Allen L. Skeen died at his home near Pleasant Hill church, Monday night, April 21st, at the age of 30 years. ### MR. AND MRS. J. C. MEYERS.

Mr. C. H. Julian, of Franklinville, suggests, "Zeb Vance Highway"

Mr. C. H. Julian, of Franklinville, suggests that the highway from Raleigh to Asheville be called the Zeb Vance Highway in honor of the state's Civil War Governor. His letter follows:

The term Central Highway as now often used in North Carolina is in the opinion of the writer a misnomer. A true central highway running from Raleigh to Asheville should pass through the following towns: Cary, Pittsboro, Siler City, Ramseur, Franklinville, Asheboro, Lexington, Salisbury, Mocksville, Statesville, Newton, Hickory, Morganton and Marion. With the general improvement of the route running through these towns, which is now taking place, this is destined to be one of the most traveled routes in the State.

It has been suggested that this route should be known as the Asheville-Asheboro-Raleigh Highway. I think Zeb Vance Highway would be a more fitting name. This great North Carolinian traveled from his birthplace in the mountains to Raleigh and went by the shortest route. This is proven by his arrival in the Chief Executive's office and the Governor's Mansion when barely 32 years of age.

I would like to make the suggestion that a bill be passed by the next Legislature of North Carolina naming this direct route Zeb Vance Highway, also that appropriate signs or markers be placed along it from Asheville to Raleigh.

Mrs. Ferree was in the finest of health and her many friends wished her many birthdays yet to come. Mrs. Ferree has been an influential woman in her community and her family and friends realize in her the old type of womanhood.

FIGHT TO CHANGE TWO-THIRDS RULE

Death of Charles F. Murphy Gives Momentum to Fight of McAdoo's Friends.

(By David F. St. Clair.)

Washington, April 28.—The death of Charles F. Murphy, has according to report, given momentum to the move of W. G. McAdoo's friends to fight for a change in the rule requiring a two-thirds vote in the Democratic national convention to nominate. The late Tammany chief was the strongest and most implacable foe to the nomination of McAdoo. He was counted upon by the anti-McAdoo forces to repeat the maneuver he executed at San Francisco in 1920 in the nomination of James M. Cox. His lever in that maneuver with the two-thirds rule.

The two-thirds rule has long been the basis of hope of minority and dark horse candidates in Democratic conventions. The effect of that rule at the Baltimore convention in 1912 changed the course of human history throughout the world in all probability. In most previous Democratic conventions it had been usual to nominate the man who had received a majority of the votes but at Baltimore Champ Clark for whom a decisive majority of the convention had registered itself, was turned down for Woodrow Wilson, and since his death the other day, Mr. Murphy, and not W. J. Bryan, is credited with having been the man who turned the convention to Wilson.

Whether that statement be historically true or not, the Murphy-Taggart Brennan wing of the party that defeated McAdoo at San Francisco in 1920 and made Cox the standard bearer by means of the two-thirds rule, is now claiming that rule can not be abrogated at the approaching New York convention except by a vote of two-thirds of the delegates.

On the other hand the Wilson wing of the party which nominated its candidate at Baltimore by means of the two-thirds rule, and the rank and file of which are McAdoo men now, is claiming that the two-thirds rule is only a rule of the convention, that it was made by a vote of a majority of the delegates like the other rules and that each convention can change that rule by a majority of the delegates voting whenever it so desires.

At the meeting of the Democratic national committee in Washington in January last, the McAdoo men did not urge a change in the two-thirds rule for they then were confident their candidates would be able to capture two-thirds of the delegates before the convention met. But connecting Mr. McAdoo's name with the oil investigation has upset that confident calculation. The most enthusiastic adherent of the Democratic candidate from California, will concede that the securing of two-thirds of the convention for his man now seems to be an impossibility but the reaction in favor of Mr. McAdoo within the last three weeks has caused independent observers here to figure out a possible majority of the convention for him.

Some of his friends are now saying that his one hope of receiving the nomination is the abrogation of the two-thirds rule and in the death of the strongest opponent to changing that rule a new hope has come to them. It has been stated here within the last week that the McAdoo leaders are going to make a fight for changing the rule if they are convinced of two things. If they see no other way to accomplish the nomination of their candidate and if they are convinced the McAdoo state delegations will back them.

If the struggle comes it is predicted that the New York convention will be one of the most memorial events in the history of the party. Some Democrats are fearful that such a struggle might disrupt the party. But other Democrats are confident that only a comparatively small part of the delegates who are instructed for the Californian or who are favorable to his candidacy can be counted on to put up a hard fight for changing the rule of the convention. It is reported that in a number of instructed delegations for McAdoo the leaders are lukewarm.

As for the death of Murphy, only one effect seems to be certain and that is that Tammany will not be able to exert the influence expected of it. But even Murphy is said to not have believed that Governor Al Smith could be nominated at all.
