VETERAN RUNNING FOR A STATE OFFICE

FRANK D. GRIST

FACTS OF INTEREST TO VOTERS A practical Printer for Commissioner

Frank D. Grist was born in Lenoir, N. C., his present home, the public schools of that place having fur-nished the foundation for his educa-of Labor and Printing.

At the age of fifteen he entered a printing office to learn the trade, and ater went in with his brother in the management of a small printing of-

In the management of this plant and the subsequent ownership and operation of his own printing office, received the training which makes him a practical printer with the training that should be required of a candidate for office of Commissioner of Labor and Printing.

The Army record of Mr. Grist hould commend him as one who is in the forefront when duty calls.

Having reached France in much less than the usual time and after training in machine gun school he sent to the front, assigned to Com-pany A, Second Machine Gun Battal-ion, First Regular Army Division. After three major engagements he was wounded in the Meuse-Argonne battle. It was at first thought he would lose his eye sight, but after several surgical operations and eight months in Army Hospitals his sight was almost perfectly restored.

His certificate of honorable charge certifies to 20 per cent dis-

After his discharge he again made his home at Lenoir, opening up the printing business which was closed while he was in the Army. His service to Lenoir as a director of the Chamber of Commerce, as a chairman of the Red Cross drive and other Gaddis, Virginia Hanner, Pauline activities is a matter of record in his Hamilton, Frances Foust, Frances home community.

for the Democratic party (it having han, Fleta Moody, Edith Osborne sent a Republican to that office two years previously) is one of which his friends are justly proud. THE CENTRAL SECRET OF WILSON'S POWER IN THE PRESIDENCY Cabinet Government as it Was and as He Wrote About It.

Josephus Daniels, in his book, "The Life of Woodrow Wilson," published by The John C. Winston Co., says that Wilson had a conception of the Presidency very different from that of most of his predecessors. In 1879, when a student in Princeton, he had written for the International Review Government in the United States," in was only twenty-three years old at Parks, Ava Steed, Jewel Thomas. the time, the definite conviction that held that the trouble was not with the organic law but with the men who filled the office of President. He expressed the same views in amplified form in his book, "Congressional Government," published six years later. He regarded government by Congressional Committee as vicious. He hammered on this subject all through the book, saying, "This is the defect to which, it will be observed, I am constantly recurring; to which I recur again and again because every examination of the system, at whatsoever point begun, leads inevitably to it as a central secret." He argued that such a system destroyed responsibility and made efficient government, he wrote. A dozen men originated it; a dozen compromises, twist and alter it."

A TOUGH SITUATION

"My wife and four children were dependent on me for their living. My stomach and liver trouble of five years had made me despendent, as no medicine seemed to belp me, and I was gradually wasting away. It was a tough situation. My cousin in Columbus, wrote me about having taken Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and advised me to try it. I am new feeling better than for fifteen years." It is a simple, harmless preparation that lake the first than for fifteen years. It is a simple, harmless preparation that lake the property of the power. The property of the property of the government, he wrote. A dozen of the policy of the government, he wrote. A dozen of the government is not the policy of the government, he wrote. A dozen compromises, twist and alter it."
