THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION, INC.BRUMMITT PORTRAYS LOSS
UNDER THE REPUBLICANS

In the last three years of the Wilson administration there were 189 bank failures, with $72,000,000 of resources, in the United States. In the last three years of "this administration," as Mr. Coolidge is careful to call it, there were 1,221 bank failures with resources of $447,000,000. More National banks failed in the year 1923 than in any of the seven years of the Wilson administration.

Many Failures This Year
And this is not all. Conditions are growing steadily worse. In the year 1923, there were 340 bank failures in the United States and in the first six months of this year there have been 428 such failures, or at the rate of $56 per year.

During eight years of Wilson administration there were twenty bank failures in North Carolina. In three months of this Republican national administration there have been more than twice as many bank failures in one Republican western state as there were in North Carolina in the eight years of the Wilson administration. There were forty-one bank failures in South Dakota in the first three months of this year.

That this condition is not confined to the banks and therefore cannot be charged to him supervision or management if the State or National banks is clearly shown by a comparison of business failures. During the last three years of the Wilson administration there were 25,314 business failures in the United States with total liabilities of $571,433,510. In the three years of the Harding-Coolidge administration there were 62,948 such failures with liabilities of $1,871,830,134.

Mr. Brummitt gave statistics to show the substantial decline in the purchasing power of the farmer's dollar under the past three years of Republican misrule in the nation. He pointed out that the Republican national administration had done nothing to restore the ruined market which the farmers so badly need.

Country Prosperous Under Wilson
Continuing Mr. Brummitt said: Everyone knows that during the Wilson administration the farmer received good prices for what he produced. No argument is needed to sustain that statement. He only has to count the money in his pocket and to remember what he then had to know its truth.

But it may be said that while the farmer received high prices for what he had to sell, he also had to pay high prices for the things that he bought, and here we come to the real test as to whether or not those high prices were for his advantage. The farmer's real condition depends upon the spread between the price of what he sells and the price of what he buys. It is because of that wide spread that he has suffered so during these three years of Republican misrule.

For many years the United States Department of Agriculture has kept figures showing the value of the farmer's dollar. That value is determined by a comparison between the relative value of the things he sells for a dollar and the things he can buy for that sum.

Here is what these figures show as to the value of the farmer's dollar from 1913 to 1922 inclusive:

1913	100
1914	105
1915	103
1916	97
1917	107
1918	112
1919	112
1920	96
1921	84
1922	89

During all the years in which the Department of Agriculture has kept figures on the subject, in only two of them preceding the Wilson administration did it reach or pass par value. In 1909 it was worth 100 and in 1912 it stood at 101. In only two of the Wilson years did it fall below 100. The October issue of the Review of Reviews, which is edited by a Republican and always has the Republican coloring, says that the value of the farmer's dollar is now 84.

The farmer is not the only one interested in the effort to obtain a fair price for his products. He must be prosperous if there is to be any real and general prosperity in the country. He usually is the first to feel any depression in prices, but his condition will be reflected in that of banks, merchants, manufacturers, and all other business.

That this true is shown by the appalling number of banks and business failures during the first three years of the Harding-Coolidge administration as compared with the small number in the last three years under Wilson.

The Solution

In any effort to find a solution of the farmer's problem we must go back to the Democratic doctrine that he must have a world market for his products. We produce much more of such staple crops as cotton, wheat and tobacco that the domestic market can absorb. The price in the home market will be fixed by the price the farmer can get for his exportable surplus. The Democratic party has always contended that this economic truth is the first factor to be considered in any real effort to relieve agricultural distress. It is interesting to note that in his Lincoln speech, Gen. Dewey admitted the correctness of this doctrine.

And yet this Republican administration has done nothing to aid the farmer in obtaining that world market which he needs. It has treated the farmer as a beggar, demanding relief from the government, and the result has been that the farmer has been reduced to a beggar's level. It is time to stop this policy and to seek the only way to restore the farmer's purchasing power, and that is to give him a world market for his products.

publican leadership will claim the credit. Already that claim is being made. And yet when those men went abroad upon the invitation of the European governments, they acted unofficially and Secretary Hughes was careful to state that they did not represent the American government.

Republican leadership would claim credit for the rust which cut the Canadian wheat crop in two and carried the price of wheat to $1.25 per bushel; this fall it would deny responsibility for a cabinet officer who sold the resources of the nation for $125,000. It would claim the honor of a settlement of the Reparations problem resulting from the unofficial advice of American business men; it would escape condemnation for a Forbes who stole or misplaced the funds provided for the disabled defenders of the Republic.

But no disclaimers can wipe out the stain of those shameful transactions, and no argument destroy the force of these facts with respect to the condition of the American farmer. This has been an administration unparalleled for bank and business failures, and unequalled for hardships suffered by agriculture.

The Remedy

The remedy for the corruption and the incapacity of Republican government during the past three years is to be found in a return to the standards and the ideals of Woodrow Wilson. The candidacy of John W. Davis offers the opportunity for the correction of these ills from which all have suffered. He was the disciple and the associate of that great leader. Upon him has fallen the mantle of the old prophet, and with it a full measure of the old master's gallant spirit. With him in the White House, assisted by the co-operation and the wisdom of our Simmons, our Overman, and our other congressional leaders, we shall have a return to that fair, that just, that honest government of those eight years.

FOURTH ANNUAL FAIR SHOWS
AGRICULTURAL PROGRESS

an article of interest. Mr. Poole is especially interested in war relics and it is not surprising as he has the distinction of having lost three uncles and a grandfather in the Civil War, and furnished two sons in the late war, both of whom returned. He is 67 years of age and comes from a long-lived family, his grandmother being 97 years of age when she died.

Other Exhibits
The art exhibit contained all kinds of interesting things, probably the most unique exhibit was that of Art Fibre which was made by Miss Sarah Plunkett a "shut in" who made the articles under the direction of the state superintendent of vocational rehabilitation. Miss Plunkett lives three miles south of Asheboro with her sister and they are greatly interested in this work, by which they can earn a livelihood.

The Carolina Training School for delinquent children had a most extensive exhibit with representatives in charge who thoroughly explained teaching and training the delinquent children of North Carolina. Many kinds of needlework and handicraft that were done by the children were shown.

The fancy work exhibit even surpassed that of former years both in quality and quantity. Visitors from outside the county say that nowhere at state or county fairs do they see more extensive fancy work than they do in Randolph.

The culinary and canning department was stocked with luscious looking edibles. That there are housewives in the county equal to the best in the country is clearly demonstrated at the annual county fair.

The negro department was creditable, containing as it did articles of apparel, canned goods and fancy work.

The booths of the business people showed interest and good taste in arrangement. There was a general co-operative spirit of the people of the county in making the fair a success and everyone realizes that many benefits are derived from county fairs.

Bench Show

The fourth annual Randolph County bench show was held as usual in connection with the county fair. Although the rain kept many away the different classes filled nicely with several exceptionally good ones.

Mr. P. H. Powell, of Denton, judged Pointers and Setters; and Dr. A. C. Bethune, of Jackson Springs, judged Fox Hounds and Beagles.

The winners and the order in which they were judged are as follows:
Pointer puppies: "Lit", owned by J. H. Garden, Bennett, first; "Jack", by the same owner second; "Va. Nall", owned by A. L. Briles, Cedar Falls, third.

Pointer dogs: "Plumgoodun", owned by W. W. Lindley, first; "Briles Frank", owned by A. L. Briles, second; "Carolina Jack", owned by F. C. Gardner, third.

MAN'S TROUBLE ARRESTED

"The past 4 years I have been going down, down, down with catarrh of the stomach and had to give up work a year ago because of my weakened condition. I suffered terribly from bloating and colic attacks. May's Wonderful Remedy was recommended to me. I took a course of it and am now feeling fine." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. For sale by Standard Drug Co. and druggists everywhere.

Since the first of the year the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, of New York, has loaned in Raleigh and vicinity over $700,000 on real estate. The loans have been handled through the Raleigh Banking and Trust Company.
