A RICHER RURAL CULTURE

The Danish farmer, says Dr. E. C. Branson, live together, play together, work together. The consequence is that their look on life is social and competitive." That is he spirit that we must develop in America and in the South these next twenty-five years. The development of social units in the country, cemented together by a spirit of comradeship, is a vital necessity. And there must also be on the farms a genuine rural cul-ture, not a mere imitation or secondhand city culture. Poets, novelists, dramatists must write from the viewpoint of country people as well as from that of the city peole. Country boys and girls must learn and take pride in the things of the country—the wonders of plant and animal life, and beauties of nature, the history of agricultural banders and agricultural of agricultural leaders and agricultural movements, the literature of nature and country life. Rural sports and rural recreation must be encour ple look to the town or city for such pleasures. The land must be tilled by men who love it and who make farming an art and a science. Farmsteads must be handed down from sire to son, each endeavoring to leave the place more beautiful and more fertile than he found it.—Clarence Poe.

We wish to thank our friends and Country Menaced By Corrupt Government

Thoughtful men and women of both parties must view with deep concern the convincing evidences of corrup-tion in the conduct of our national To Support Davis government. Errors in Administrawhen no bad motive is apparent and when those who commit the errors make prompt and sincere efforts to correct them. But when corruption appears in Government and the re-sponsible administrative heads are indifferent to it by by species declarations attempt to condone it, Democracy is confronted with a real danger.

Official corrpution is a menace which cannot be temporized with or condoned without jeopardizing every principle of free government and every right of its citizens. Corruption in government is not a matter to ignored nor treated lightly nor evaded nor excused. Whether it exists the form of a corrupt policy like high protective tariff or whether is manifested in the individual acts of officials, it is an insidious and dangerous thing, which, if permitted to exist, will spread contagion not only throughout the government but like-wise to the body politic. It contaminates government; it contaminates business, which underlies everything in our national life; it contaminates the electorate, and saps the moral fibre of our youth. To what extent its destructive effect will be felt in this country unless there is a complete change in the national administration can only be conjectured, because those now in authority whose duty it was to eradicate it and cleanse the government have proceeded only when ac-tion was demanded by the legislative branch of the government and then proceeded reluctantly and tardily Worse still, those in authority, rein forced by party leadership, have sought to conceal instead of having sought to reveal the facts in order to perpetuate the reactionary element in the Republican party in power for another four years.

The course of the Democratic party in this matter is plain; it is to mar-shal all the moral forces of America in behalf of clean government, and when intrusted with power, to use every resource of the administration to so thoroughly cleanse the govern- by restoring h ment in every department and bu-reau until not a taint of the contaminstion remains

The duty of honest men and women in all parties is equally plain; it is cooperative instead of individual and to join forces with the Democratic
