

Out Of Their Mouths They Are Condemned

The Republican Secretary of Agriculture practically has given the lie direct to the Republican insinuation that farmers are broke because of their own recklessness and bad business judgment.

It is not very polite for a member of the administration to talk that way when the President himself has told Congress that the farmers got themselves into trouble, but Secretary Wallace may not have thought for the moment what the political effect of his statement would be.

"These losses," wrote Secretary Wallace, "have not been due to inefficiency on the part of farmers. Practically all of them were incurred by men who had been doing fairly well until they entered the period of drastic deflation."

The Extension Department of the North Carolina Sanatorium has arranged to furnish to tuberculous sufferers the necessary sanitary supplies to keep from infecting others, at less than retail cost.

G. O. P. Employers Use Coercion For Votes

Certain Republican employers are beginning to bring pressure on their employees to force them to vote for President Coolidge, under a thinly disguised threat unless he is elected "business will suffer" and they will lose their jobs.

Mr. J. M. Marville, chairman of Johns-Manville Co., has sent to each of his 450 employees a letter telling them that "after carefully reviewing the political situation," he is "fully convinced that the election of Messrs. Coolidge and Dawes means a great deal to this country, also general business conditions."

INTERESTING LETTER

W. P. Allred, of Corydon, Iowa. Writes of His Recent Visit To North Carolina

The visit back to my birthplace after an absence of seventy-one years was one of the most pleasant events of the later years of my life. Wherever we went my daughter and myself were greeted with a most cordial reception and welcome by our relatives and friends.

Many changes have been made during the intervening years that make some of the places that I knew as a boy appear somewhat different at first sight, but after looking them over they were familiar enough.

G. O. P. Says Small Merchants To Blame

Small merchants are to blame for their bankruptcies, they are soon to be told by the Department of Commerce, which is broadcasting a document that will prove they are wrong if they think the Republican administration has any responsibility in the matter.

Bad management in some form appears to be the cause of most of the failures among retail merchants, the Department of Commerce says. But the Department does not inform these retailers that the Republican tariff taxes them and their business along with every one and everything else.

Republican leaders and officials in Washington began three years ago to tell the farmer that he was to blame for all his troubles—that he was buying too much land, owning too many automobiles, spending too much money on the education of his children, and investing in worthless stocks, and that if he cured himself of these extravagances he would not be in distress.

The Old Blue Backers

(From The Greensboro Patriot.) Some of the old timers certainly did learn how to spell. Spelling was an important thing then in the schools. Nowadays there are so many other things taught that probably not as much time is given to spelling, and it is true, as The Observer says, that some people who are apparently educated do not know how to spell.

She had descended in wrath upon her husband as he stood at the stage door. "What are you doing here?" she demanded.

It was up to him to think quickly, and he did. "Hello, my dear," he greeted her mildly. "I heard you were coming down town, and, wishing to see you, I came here—knowing this would be the first place you would look for me."—Judge.

POLICE STRIKE STORY IS BECOMING KNOWN

Senator George W. Pepper of Pennsylvania, who undertook last spring to prove that there were scandals in the Republican administration at Washington is now trying to show that the "Coolidge myth" is serious history.

"The popular picture of Calvin Coolidge is entirely accurate," declares Senator Pepper in a speech he made in Manchester, N. H. Manchester is only a little distance from the line of Massachusetts. The "Coolidge myth" may still survive in New Hampshire, it is pointed out, but it has begun to be known for what it is in Massachusetts.

"Nobody has interpreted him (the President) to the country," Senator Pepper continued. "There is no Coolidge legend. Those who affirm that there is such a legend and that it is baseless, are themselves the myth-makers of journalism."

Little by little the true story of Mr. Coolidge's part in the Boston strike has become known throughout the country and it does not fit the picture that the Republican propagandists have painted of him. His silence and inaction during the revelations of crookedness in the naval oil leases and during the investigation of Attorney General Daugherty have confirmed the real account of his hesitancy and halting during the police strike until after Mayor Peters had suppressed the rioting and disorder on his own initiative and in spite of Governor Coolidge's reply to call for cooperation that he the Governor could "not see any action he could take."

Stockbrokers operating in Wall Street are conducting a propaganda for President Coolidge by broadcasting letters declaring that his election will stimulate the stock market and create "higher prices."

These letters, some of them going to persons who are neither customers of the stockbrokers circulating them nor traders in the stock market, are captioned "Daily Market Suggestions."

The prospects seem to be very good for a Republican victory at the November election and if President Coolidge is elected, believe we will have higher prices for stocks.

"This should stimulate business, as all of the business men of the country have confidence in him and his policies."

The letter then urges "the people" to "accumulate good industrials and railroad stocks in all reactions in anticipation of a pre-election rise which should take place a little later."

This is the kind of propaganda, it is pointed out that is spread by certain big financial interests centering in Wall Street to force the enactment of the Mellon tax plan, which would have reduced the taxes on the incomes of millionaires and billionaires while giving little or no relief to the small taxpayers. President Coolidge is said by Republican newspapers to have declared his intention of viewing his election as "a mandate" to repeal the present Democratic tax law under which more than six millions of taxpayers have been benefited and substitute the Mellon plan, which would have given the largest measure of reduction to a relative few of the richest taxpayers in the country.

It is commented also that the letter being spread over the country by the Wall Street brokers makes no reference to an improvement in agriculture if President Coolidge is elected and offers no suggestion for investment in any other than "good industrials" and "railroad stocks."

John W. Davis has expressed himself in favor of an amendment of the Esch-Cummings transportation act which the farmers of the West are holding responsible for the excessive freight rates on agricultural products.

Democratic leaders are predicting that a campaign of propaganda and coercion by powerful interests which want Coolidge and Dawes elected may be expected within the next few weeks. Already a big New York concern has adopted the plan of writing letters to its employees practically threatening that unless they vote for Coolidge and Dawes they will lose their jobs.

Poem by Uncle John

We have to use the proper bait in fishing for a whale, and unless we fish in earnest, we are mighty apt to fail. Unless a fellow prides himself in knowing more'n the fish, he may cast hisself at supper-time, beside an empty dish. While some may lose along the creek, and never land a thing, there'll be others waddle by 'em, with a dozen on their string!

There's only one condition that compels the perch to bite, and they'll yank the bobber under, if you hook 'em baited right. There's tragedy in fishin' same as any other art—due to ignorance and stupidity, which can't be told apart! But the chap will face a platter full of savory breakfast, fried, if his heart is in the bait-oon that nestles by his side.

And that's the solemn principle that underlies the sport, which is jest as true in enterprise of any other sort!
