Bed clothes are not to keep the cold out, but to keep the warmth in. The human body is its own furnace, and will furnish all the heat needed to keep it comfortable, provided the heat is not allowed to escape. The first thing is a warm mattress.

If you can afford it, get an extra thick mattress. If you can't, use two mattresses. If you haven't two mattreases cover the springs with newspapers. Put in as many layers as you like. If newspapers aren't handy, sheets of heavy wrapping paper or builder's paper are just as good. Paper is a poor conductor of heat and so keeps the heat in, instead of allowing it to get but.

Spread a thick blanket or small comforter over the mattress, tucking it in smooth and tight all around. Then put in your sheets. Tuck these in at the foot and sides, especially at the foot. Have your top sheet long enough to fold over the blankets. Now about covers. A wool blanket and a cotton comforter are warmer than two comforters. A light top cover that is windproof will keep your bed warm. The bedding rolls used during the war had a cunvas dap that came over the top of the bed and tied in by ropes

This was windproof and waterproof If you can't get a cunvas cover for your bed, take two old blankets, spread a layer of newspapers between and tie them together like the old-frankened comforters our grandmoth-
