The shortage of pastures this year makes it more important that we think more of the liming of our land and getting pasture legumes growing as well as more grass. This year has also shown us how to make pastures that will stand the drought. A few days ago I visited a farmer who has been seeding some lespedeza for the past two years. This farmer's stock past two years. This farmer's stock were all fat and happy, and as we walked over the pasture we found that the lespedeza was standing the drought fine. This farmer stated that he had solved the pasture problem on past two years. This farmer's stock he had solved the pasture problem on his farm and said that he was going to put in twenty acres more next year. Many more farmers in Randolph county should seed their land this fall with the idea of putting out lespedeza next spring along with other grasses and legumes. Sweet clover is fast coming into favor as a pasture legume and stands the dry weather fine. It is never too early to start but now is the time that you should be seriously planning-what you are going to do with your fields next year. What are you going to do with the land that you plan on putting in grain this fall.

This season has also demonstrated that a piece of land with a fence around it is not a pasture, so we should plan on building more fences this winter. The ideal would be to have a fence around every field on our farms so that when we harvested a crop of corn or soybeans or any other crop for that matter we could turn our stock in to gather up the waste. It looks like very little to us sometimes, but there is where the old cows make us money by taking the things that we consider of no account and g them into money for us h the milk pail. At the present the greater part of the pastures

PAVING DURING. AUGUST

More than 84 miles of paving was laid on the state highway system during August, according to a statement of the state highway commission last week. More than 2,000 miles of paving has been done on the state system, 500 miles of which is on Route 10. sure that you are all proud of the fact The paving done during August is classified as follows: Concrete, 38.22 In regard to the county fair I want miles; asphalt concrete, 17.26 miles; sand asphalt, 8.63 miles; and concrete base, 20.12 miles.
