TO FARM RELIEF ACT

Republicans Fear Farmer Vote At Coming Election Unless Help Is Given. (By David F. St. Clair) Washington, April 12.—Will con-gress enact any legislation before its adjournment giving the farmers re-lief? That pressing question is now being heard here on all. sides. It arcose suddenly about two weeks ago after it had been said all the winter that the farmers could not agree on any program of legislation and the administration and congress did not know what to do. The fact that the farmers were divided gave the poli-ticians here a great deal of relief and some politicians are accused of try-ing to keep the farmers divided so as to continue this relief. The hardest problem in this world

The hardest problem in this world for the politicians to solve is to re- with the party's hopes at the aplation but congress has again come face to face with this great difficulty. Representatives of farm organiza-tions from every section of the coun-try have been in Washington for the last ten days and the senate and house agricultural committees are grinding away with their extended hearings. The secret of this revival of ener-gy in an effort to put over farm legislation is said to be due to the fact that the representatives of the cotton, corn, wheat and live stock lieve the ills of the farmers by legis-lation but congress has again come face to face with this great difficulty.
