Randolph county within three days was discovered Tuesday night at the home of John Hill, a mile south of Trinity. Mrs. Lula Hill, 25-year-old mother of two children, was found dead, her head pierced by a bullet fired from a gun her husband says was in her own hand. The first news of Mrs. Hill's death came when Mr. Hill ran to the home of Mrs. S. G. Lohr shortly after 8:00 o'clock, waskened her by calling her through her window that "Lula has killed herself."

A second tragedy occurring in help. For something like five minutes no one was about the house but himself, the children having been taken in by Mrs. Lohr. They had no sooner gotten into the house when the little girl, age eight, said, "Miss Lohr, papa killed our mama. He took her by the hand, and shot her in the mouth." The little boy, age six, verified the statement. The children were in a nervous state and did not testify before the coroner's jury Tuesday night but Mrs. Lohr told of what they had said to her.

When additional help came, including the sheriff's deputies, the house

Busy Taking Exams In Asheboro School

As announced in last week's Cou-As announced in last week's Courier, the regular mid-year examinations are being given in the Asheboro schools this week. The superintendent urges that all students study at night and do their best on all subjects. This is especially important for members of the graduating class, as well as other students.

place, place, As is well known in Asheboro, the local high school now graduates two types of students. All those averaging as much as "four plus" on all subjects for the entire four years receive diplomas that carry college entrance with them. Those falling below this mark in any subject receive diplomas of the non-college entrance. North Carolina. The college has diplomas of the non-college entrance type. Such students are never recommended for regular college work, though they may sometimes enter college to take commercial courses or other special work. This being the case, Mr. Hilker thinks is is highly important that all do as well as possible on the examinations.

The second session of the coroner's jury held at Trinity Wednesday afternoon, with Dr. Tiffany Barnes, acting coroner, rendered the decision that "Mrs. Hill came to her death by a gunshot wound by a party or parties unknown to the jury."

The little girl was questioned by the body and the child clung to her former statement that her father was holding her mother's hand and that her mother was screaming. The child also stated that the pistol that always hangs on the wall was in her
