Farmer Who Signs Will Be Paid More For His Weed Crop

Interest Of Every Farmer Who Signs Up For Weed Crop

The tobacco grower who signs the reduction agreement offered by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration will get more money for his tobacco this fall and in 1934 and 1935.

This is the avowed policy of the AAA as expressed by Chester Davis, chief of the production office, in a statement sent to the North Carolina State College Extension Service last week.

Mr. Davis and his association J. B. Hutson, chief of the tobacco section, assure the "small" grower producing from 4 to 5 acres that his interests will be protected.

The two officials also assure the man whose crop was cut seriously last year due to blue mold, frost and other damage that his interest will be protected.

But the two men are equally as emphatic in saying that payment benefits will go only to the man who signs the agreement. In other words, the AAA must have hearty and full cooperation before it can do anything in bringing tobacco prices up to parity with the things a farmer has to buy.

During the week of September 11, tobacco farmers in North Carolina furnished a notable example of how growers would cooperate with one another and with the government by their complete willingness to sign the reduction agreements leaving to be solved later some of the perplexing questions which naturally arose.

At noon on Wednesday, September 13, tobacco growers in 48 counties had signed 31,818 tentative contracts involving 328,501 acres. Most of these contracts had come from the eastern part of the State because the growers in the piedmont area had not held their community meetings at that time. It was estimated by Dean I. O. Schaub that the sign-up would be complete by Saturday, September 16, and he said close to 100 percent of the growers would sign.

Adopt Standard Milk Ordinance For Town Of Asheboro

A bit of news of interest to many people is the adoption of the Standard Milk Ordinance by the town of Asheboro. This ordinance is recommended by the U. S. Public Health Association, but has special provisions. The ordinance provides that every person, or company, selling milk in a town must get a permit from the city authorities.

This, however, will not apply to a person owning one cow who does not deliver milk to customers. Whole milk may be sold from the home without interference.

This plan is designed as a public welfare movement that will aid in the distribution of pure milk. Dairy milk is inspected and reported upon, also dairy conditions of sanitation are inspected and published. The dairies furnishing milk to Asheboro received A-1 ratings at the last inspection given the press for publication.

Elms Threatened By Deadly Blight In United States

Washington.—The elm, one of America's most historic trees, is threatened by the Dutch elm disease, a deadly blight only recently appearing in the United States.

The agriculture department has appropriated funds to combat the disease. Some of the most celebrated trees in the nation are elms. George Washington is supposed to have taken command of the Continental army beneath a huge elm at Cambridge. At Croysden, Ind., stood an elm beneath which the state constitution was adopted in 1816.

In Central park, New York city, stands an elm planted by King Edward VII when he visited this country as the Prince of Wales. It was beneath the elm at the corner of the campus of the Ohio college, O., that the state was founded 100 years ago.

The Dutch elm disease is deadly in its action, and may kill all the elm trees over an extensive area if not controlled. One of the first symptoms is the sudden wilting of the leaves. This is followed by a brown discoloration in the sapwood under the bark.

A line of better grade half hose are now being worked out for the plant and Laurin Cranford announces that they hope to open within two or three weeks.

Increase Is Noted In Employment Of Workers In County

Tabulations to date given by H. C. Parks, of the National Re-employment office here, from a survey made by the Asheboro office, show an increase of 674 people added to the mills and factories in the county with quite a number expecting to be called, within the next two or three weeks.

There are a few mills not yet canvassed. The increase in weekly pay rolls as reported to date shows a substantial increase and the wage earners are enjoying the shorter hours with better pay.

Merchants and other business houses report better business and they, also, have helped to decrease the number of unemployed by adding more help to their forces. Farmers are more or less optimistic and are looking for the future to reveal better times for them—their slogan being—"Smaller Acreage and Better Prices."

Twenty-One Known Dead From Storm In Eastern Carolina

Path Of Destruction & Wreckage In Wake Of Storm That Swept Eastern Part.

Damage Is Large Property Loss Will Run Into Millions; Roads, Homes, Public Buildings Ruined.

It is difficult for Piedmont North Carolina to visualize the destruction and wreckage that swept the eastern coast of North Carolina last week end. A storm came blowing across this section at the rate of 100 miles per hour and left twenty-one known dead and property damage running well into millions with acute suffering and threatened epidemic in its wake.

Waters from the Neuse river rose so high that the handsome steel and concrete bridge over the river was almost demolished. This bridge has been a pride and boast of eastern Carolina since it was opened formally within the past few years. Arrangements have been made by E. B. Jeffress, head of the Highway and Public Works Department, to build a shuttle-train operated over the Norfolk Southern railway bridge, making four round trips daily carrying those who work in New Bern and live in Bridgeton. Automobiles are being ferried across the river. Chairman Jeffress estimates that the bridge may be repaired within 60 days, although it may be possible to let traffic across earlier.

Churches, warehouses, homes were washed away, roofs blown off houses, hotels, schools, stores—some lifted up and floated away.

Almost every point along the coast suffered most extensively and it is feared that all the damage is not yet known from isolated spots along the coast. Red Cross and Relief workers as well as public health workers have rushed to the coast and are almost too occupied to furnish detailed reports. It is indeed a tragic spot—this eastern Carolina today!
