Sandy Graham Will Speak Friday Evening; Big Parade On Thursday Afternoon

The Merchants Exposition made a splendid start when crowds thronged to the exhibition hall on the opening night, heard Hubert Olive speak, saw the exhibits and enjoyed the free acts to the extent of gales of laughter rippling through the entire crowd.

Mr. Olive, past Legion commander in the state, was introduced by Cleveland Thayer. Mr. Olive's speech was both grave and gay, outlining many splendid points of service of the American Legion and pointing out the value of such an organization to a town, county, state and nation.

The speaker mentioned the object for the local Legion sponsoring this exposition, which is to raise funds for their proposed hut, to be erected in Asheboro at an early date.

Tuesday evening will be amateur night with a radio hour, home talent entertainment and the interesting free acts. These free acts have created quite wide-spread interest and are considered unusually good. Monkeys, apes and such on bicycles, mules with an education and dancing girls sufficiently vary the entertainment to interest everybody.

Wednesday evening, the old fiddlers came into their own, with the whole evening to themselves, with the exception of the free act period. Thursday is the big day with Greensboro and High Point sending their drum and bugle corps to Asheboro for the parade at 5:00 o'clock. The parade will form at the school.

Randolph CCC Camp To Be Retained According To Representative Cooley

Leading Citizens From All Sections Urged Action From Representatives

Many Projects Are Already Well Begun

General Satisfaction Expressed At Cooley's Splendid & Effective Work

For the past ten days, Randolph county's CCC camp, located half-way between Franklinville and Ramseur, has been wavering on the brink of being disbanded. Several days ago, official notice came to the camp commander, Lieutenant Lynn Waters, that the camp would be disbanded about the first of April. In lieu of the fact that a number of projects have been started in the county, now that spring weather has descended upon Randolph, pressure began bearing down upon the powers that be in Washington from all corners of the county.

Especially urgent were the letters, wires and other messages going in to representatives in Washington whose influence finally made itself so felt that the earlier executive order was rescinded and the camp will be continued, according to a telegram Monday night from Harold D. Cooley, congressman from the fourth district.

Due to the fact that a number of soil erosion projects were started in several sections of Randolph last fall and, on account of the prolonged bad weather of the winter, little work was possible, many of the leading citizens felt that it was hardly fair to disband the camp just as the weather would permit some real activity in a county where a program of soil erosion and reforestation is well begun.

Plans for work on the city watershed is also just about to be launched with some of this labor, and the city officials were equally upset plans were to be disrupted at this stage of the work.

Randolph's camp also is one of the latest to be established and it was the general consensus of opinion that the camp should be retained, at least during the period from April to September, which is the best period for the work.

Leading citizens from Franklinville, Ramseur, Asheboro and other places in the county who have made recent contacts with Congressman Cooley, Senator Reynolds and others in Washington, are expressing delight with the effective work done in the retention of the local camp.

Congressman Cooley's telegram to The Courier follows: "Executive Order rescinded. Randolph camp will be continued. Harold D. Cooley."

Mr. Moser Out
I. C. Moser, who has been ill for the past several weeks, is sufficiently recovered to be in his office a short while on Tuesday. Mr. Moser has not been attending the present term of court as yet, but he is able to supervise his business again, which will be a source of satisfaction to his many friends in Asheboro and Randolph.

Superintendent Of Welfare Answers Many Questions Of Interest To Randolph Folk

According to Robert Lloyd, superintendent of public welfare in Randolph county, questions concerning jobs, work and relief are pouring into his office daily. Since there is no dole in the county, save a small fund that may be dispensed to unemployables, Mr. Lloyd makes several matters clear. The PWA work comes under contracts including sewer and water lines and schools. The PWA is the remains of the relief program which has been transferred into a work program instead of a dole, as was the case for a year or so.

Mrs. Irene Neal, formerly head case worker for Randolph, has been made certifying agent for the county with headquarters in Mr. Lloyd's office in the court house and the two operate as best they can upon a limited stipend.

Mr. Lloyd asks several questions that daily come up in his office, hoping if he gives the answers in this newspaper, that his work will become more clear to those whom it touches. Says Mr. Lloyd:

"There have been a number of questions asked recently about the relief and WPA program as carried on in Randolph county."
