Job Hunting? Don't Overdo Your Charm

By Betty Clarke
(A) Feature Service Writer

You're trying to get a job. Perhaps you're one of this year's college graduates. Or perhaps job-hunting is an old story.

In either case, you get out your best suit, give yourself a shampoo, and put on your brightest look. For these success stories tell you personally will get the job.

They're right, young lady—but you must remember that personality implies good grooming as much as sparkling enthusiasm.

So, when you get out that best suit, be sure it's conservative in cut and color, and pressed neatly. Your blouses must be spotless.

And if you're the sort of person whose blouses is forever parting company with your skirt, wear a tailored dress.

Don't forget to wear your hat and gloves. Your employer-to-be may want to see if your gloves are as neat as the rest of your outfit. It doesn't always follow.

And keep your hat on—even if you feel your golden curls really should be shown. Your executive may not be that susceptible.

This is a time to experiment with your coiffure. The way you've been wearing your hair probably is as good as any. And you'll look more natural.

Better keep your new wave a few days before job-hunting begins—again, it's the naturalness that counts.

Don't confuse your brightest look with the brighter of cosmetics. Employers, as a rule, are ultra-conservative. They don't mind a bit of lipstick and a mild application of rouge, but most of them object to flashy nail polish. Clean hands and neat manicuring are far more important than colored nails.

Hasty Contends He Shot in Self Defense

referred to a book in the solicitor's hands. "I think it unfair for the solicitor to read those papers."

"If you knew what I was reading from and where I got it you would not say it is unfair," said Mr. Coggin.

"I know what it is and where you got it," answered Mr. Moser. "Then," laughed Mr. Coggin, you shouldn't say it is unfair.

Here the court called at adjournment for a few minutes.

Ems Kennedy was next placed on the witness stand and discussed hearing Babe Yow "threaten" Hasty. After considering argument and bickering among the attorneys, Mr. Kennedy said the deceased told him that Arthur Hasty was trying to "mess him up" again and he was going to "fix him."

He further swore that Yow went in with an open knife in his hand. Solicitor Coggin was at a loss to know why Mr. Kennedy had failed to give the court this information when Hasty was up for trial last court and was told that Mr. Kennedy was at Vass at a hunting lodge.

Tom Hatwood, colored cook for many years, was placed on the stand again and told that Yow asked him what "Mr. Will and Mr. Arthur" were doing when he saw them sitting talking, and that he warned him of his (Yow's) intention of "cleaning out the place" adding, "If you don't want to be in it, you'd better get out." Tom stated that Yow was "under the influence of whiskey."

J. L. Overman gave Babe Yow a "bad character" as did Tommy Brookshire, former jailor, who admitted that he had never been actually "mean" when arrested by him. Nathan Cox was put on the stand and his testimony ruled out. Bobo, a barber, who came to Asheboro from South Carolina, also gave Yow a bad name.

Clifford Meyers, a county deputy, was then placed on the stand and swore that both Kennedy and Tom Hatwood were both "bad at drink" themselves.

Pearly Miller, night police officer, again took the stand and was asked about the character of Will Hasty, and Hatwood and stated that they "drank some" giving Hatwood a "pretty bad" character. Officer Miller was also asked about what Wilbur Martin, nephew of the Hasty brothers, said at the night of the coroner's inquest when Dr. Lambert asked what Yow had in his hand at the time of the killing. Mr. Miller stated that Martin answered that he "had nothing. If he did, he did not see it."

He was also asked if Yow was dangerous when intoxicated and he answered that he had never considered Yow violent. He was "fussy" but not dangerous.

Dr. Mattison was then called to the stand and was asked about an attack which Will Hasty had soon after the shooting. The doctor stated that Hasty was not drunk, that he had a heart attack and his blood pressure was 96.

Will Hasty, brother of the defendant, was placed on the stand and asked about his ailment during last court week, which he said was a nervous affection and when asked where he went after being discharged from the local hospital, recalled after sometime, that it was Dr. Ashworth's hospital which he claimed was not a place for treatment of drunks, but "nervous."

This concluded the evidence and, before court adjourned for noon recess, the Judge asked the attorneys about the length of time they would require for speeches. As best it could be ascertained, it will take the better part of the afternoon for the lawyers. Solicitor Coggin stated that he could do without in thirty minutes.

The state yesterday afternoon placed four witnesses on the stand in opening its case.

R. H. Brown, Asheboro, the first called testified he was in the cafe when the shooting took place. After giving a general outline of the fixtures and equipment in the cafe, Mr. Brown stated he was seated at a counter about four or five feet from the defendant and his brother William Hasty. Arthur Hasty, Mr. Brown said, had one hand on his brother's shoulder. Nearby, he said, Yow was standing.

A few seconds later, the witness said, Arthur Hasty had walked around in rear of the counter. Yow he said was then standing at the opening between a counter which runs north and south and one running east and west.

"A second later," Mr. Brown said, "I heard a click, then a shot," and Yow threw up his hands—"here the witness placed his two hands across his shoulders showing the manner in which Yow reacted after the shot was heard.

When questioned by Mr. Coggin, the witness said he heard two more shots.

He stated he saw a pistol in the defendant's hand—that the pistol was pointed his direction but that the bullet "evidently" struck Yow. The next he saw Yow, Brown stated was on the sidewalk outside the cafe.

Under cross examination, when pressed for a reason why he considered the defendant shot Yow, Mr. Brown said:

"I saw a pistol in Arthur's hand—I heard the shot and Yow was lying on the sidewalk."

Mr. Brown said he helped place Yow in an ambulance and rode to the hospital where the man was declared dead. Later, he said, he understood the body was taken to Pugh's Funeral Home.

City Policeman, Miller was placed on the stand and told of seeing the defendant after the affair. He said Mr. Hasty was decidedly "nervous" and seemed to have been drinking.

H. L. Loflin, employed at Pugh's Funeral Home testified as to three wounds in Yow's body. He said one was just below the collar bone and seemed to have taken a course through the dead man's chest.

Two other holes, he said, one above the other, were located in Yow's left side. Under cross examination said, he could not say that the wounds were caused by bullets.

Mrs. James Ollie Yow, widow of the dead man, the next witness, said she last saw her husband alive the morning of the 18th. He was going to work at that time she said. She said he was in perfect health that morning. The next she saw him, was in Pugh's Funeral Home, dead.

What appeared to be an effort on the part of the defense attorney to bring out evidence that Mr. Yow was a man of unusual strength met with little satisfactory response from the witness.

"He weighed about 180-190 pounds, did he not", she was asked. "He weighed about 175 pounds", came the answer.

"He had big strong muscle did he not?", was the next question. "And big arms?"

"No Sir", Mrs. Yow answered, "his arms were very thin".

Questions regarding her husband's action when he had been drinking were overruled by the court.

Deputy Sheriff Ben Morgan was called and testified that a previous witness, R. H. Brown, was a man of good reputation. There was no cross examination.

Court was then adjourned until this morning at 9:30 o'clock.
