Farm Families To Receive Home Aid

Raleigh, Sept. 9.—The task of helping 275 farm families find new homes has been placed under the direction of C. L. McCaslin, former Gaston County assistant farm agent.
McCaslin has been employed by the N. C. State College extension service and the Tennessee Valley Authority to work with families who must move out of the Hiwassee Dam reservoir area in Cherokee County before water covers their land.
With the help of other agencies, McCaslin is helping these families locate new homes in nearby counties of North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia.
An extensive program has been planned to help them find homes that are suitable and to become an integral part of the communities in to which they move.
An educational program will be carried out to help the relocated families build their new farms and homes up into "model agricultural enterprises," said John W. Goodman, assistant director of the extension service.

State Rates High Industrially

Raleigh, Sept. 9.—North Carolina is the most highly industrialized southern state, says Major R. Van Leer, new dean of the engineering school at N. C. State College.
"This State is in harmony with the industrial age in which we are living," he adds, "and is offering more and more opportunities for engineering and engineers."
Major Van Leer says the demand for technical training, knowledge, and skill is on the increase in North Carolina and throughout the South. The new dean of engineering came to State this summer from the University of Florida where he also headed that institution's engineering school.
Under his direction, State College hopes to develop one of the best engineering schools in the country.

"We hope to build upon the foundation so ably laid by Dean W. C. Riddick that the engineering school might render a yet greater service to North Carolina and the south," Van Leer said.
Discovery of new industrial uses for products of southern farms will be one of the aims of the engineering school under the direction of Van Leer.
Van Leer also expects to develop graduate work that the college might grant the doctorate in engineering.
"At the present there are no technical schools in the south qualified to grant the doctorate in engineering," Van Leer said. "We propose to become the first."
Keats asked that the following inscription be placed on his grave: "Here lies one whose name was writ in water."
Johannes Brahms, the composer, was a grandson of an innkeeper.

About Advertising

Newspaper advertising is merely the salesman that talks to more prospects than any other salesman can.
No merchant would think of employing his star salesman on the floor hit and miss — a day now and a day next month, giving him a job whenever he happened to feel in the mood. Every merchant wants his star salesman on the job regularly.
Smart merchants, who know how to make advertising pay, keep their advertising, which talks to more prospects than all their salesmen put together, many times over, on the job regularly.

STORIES IN STAMPS
FIRST MODERN KING OF EGYPT
YOUTHFUL good-looking King Farouk recently ascended the Egyptian throne to become the first modern ruler of this ancient country. His coronation took place on his 18th birthday, slightly more than a year after the death of his father, King Fuad.
"The perfectly educated boy," Farouk is the first ruler of Egypt in many centuries inducted into office as an independent monarch. He is likewise the first modern ruler of Egypt not directly under the direction of either Turkey or Great Britain. Full independence was won by Egypt in a treaty signed in London, Aug. 26, 1936. Thus, Farouk rules over an entirely sovereign state.
The only son and the eldest child of the late King Fuad and his second wife, the Princess Mazil, Farouk is one of the world's youngest rulers. Several years in British schools, wide travel and private tutoring give him a rich background. Farouk is pictured as a young prince on a 1929 Egyptian stamp.
