Troops in Possession; One Man Came in on Roller Skates.

New York, Sept. 18.—(.P)—The doughboys took possession of New York tonight and nothing was quiet on any front.

The roar of reunion rose louder and louder over a normal quiet of automobiles and elevated trains as troops of the American Legion mov ed in for their annual meeting, and the wide-eyed folk, of Broadway stuck their fingers in their ears and fled to the soothing clatter of the subways. Traffic was in a snarl all over town, drums rolled, bugles shrilled, bells clanged and cannons comed out that the army was here again after 20 years.

There were no quiet streets. The roops were on all the streets. They were on foot. They were in automobiles, rigged up to look like the ones they traveled in in France.

They were arriving on trains. They were coming in on boats. They were coming in on airplanes. One man even came in on roller
