Oh dear, what shall I do with baby? cries the distracted mother. Inquires baby's big little brother, "Didn't we get a book of instructions with it, mother?" Like the new car or electric refrigerator. Directions for assembling, and keeping in good order.

Each baby however is an exclusive model. Each succeeding model is also different from the last or the several preceding ones. Experience may help but the mother of the sixth may be as greatly distracted as she was with her first. Experience is not the whole of knowledge. Many babies are sacrificed by trusting too much to experience alone. Even the skilled physician may be sore put at times to adjust his technical knowledge to the needs of a not too smooth running baby.

What does the book of instructions say? The baby should eat a very little. If it does these three great deal, sleep much, and cry a things the probabilities are the mother may be assured that her infant is doing well.

How little should it cry? Well, some babies are so good natured that they just about do not cry at all, which is not always a condition to be desired. Crying is a chief way for small infants to get a little exercise. Certainly if a baby cries more than one hour in twenty-four, there is something not normal.

How much is much sleep? For a new baby two to four hours awake is within reason. More and especially if at night, probably points to mismanagement, or some illness.

Baby should eat a great deal. That does not mean he should eat all the time, nor does it mean that he should eat very often, as many "experienced" mothers seem to believe. If he eats too much, or if he eats too often, which is about the same thing said in different words, he may be fat and jolly, but is more likely to be distressed. If the food fits baby's needs there is not much doubt but that he will sleep the required hours and his voice will be infrequently heard. Contentment, smiles, happiness. These are psychic reflections of physical well being. (The clinic for well babies is held in the board of health offices on the last Wednesday of every month at one o'clock.)

Harry Fisher

Tons of newspaper and magazine words have been ground out in behalf of Harry Fisher, world-famous tramp and trick bicycling clown, who will make a personal appearance at The Randolph Fair for five days beginning Tuesday, Sept. 28.

Clown Fisher, who loves to make the nation laugh, wears tattered clothes and a shiny silk hat—thus he is the perfect contrast, clown and dude, his aim being to "show off" sartorially, forgetting about his worn and torn raiment.

In his mouth he twists a well-burned cigar, and on his alleged coat are dozens of pretentious medals mostly of the tin variety—again a phase of the buffoon's theatrical conceit. An artificial rose rests in his lapel. His shoes would easily fit a rowboat and his trousers a family of fat people.

This is a general picture of the artificially bewhiskered gentleman whose antics have entertained the peoples of every corner of the civilized globe.

His chief prop is a trick and exasperating bicycle which any child with a reasonably good pair of legs and average intelligence can handle, but no one can quite achieve what Harry achieves with the Victorian vehicle for mishandling and deliberate destruction is Harry's business.

Just how successful is this Fisher fellow at producing laughter for children, and their elders, will be determined when he is presented at The Randolph Fair.

More than 30 years ago, when Harry Fisher was known as Zinco on the stage and in the world of the big tops, he pedaled a bicycle down the famous Chutes of Luna Park in Coney Island. He has been known as the Luna Park Clown ever since.

having spent more than a dozen years at that internationally-famous playground. Millions saw and loved him there.

Harry is no youngster, but his pep belies his years, and vice-versa. He was born near Hamburg, Germany, on August 5, 1882, and for 36 of those years has been a clown in show business of all varieties and branches—vaudeville, amusement parks, fairs, music halls, etc.

Many years ago he had his own group act, the Eight Cycling Models, all female. He then formed Harry Fisher and Company a three-people cycling comedy act which played over the major circuits in the United States and Canada, as well as foreign appearances in the capitals of the world.

The bike which he employed to ride down the Chutes in Coney Island (before Luna Park was constructed around those self-same Chutes) was not really a bike but a unicycle or one-wheeler. He scored such sensation with his as he sped down the deep incline and toppled, bike and all, into the large lagoon that when Luna was built he naturally became its first mirth-maker. In later years he appeared with circuses, including the Sells-Downs Famous Shows.

Like virtually every clown, Harry has hobbies. One of them is to raise children. (He has five at the last count.) Another is to impersonate Santa Claus. This is not exactly a hobby but a profession, for he has played Santa in department stores at Christmas time for years, and since 1922 has been the chief chimney-climbing, red-robed gentleman at Wanamaker's in New York.

He's clown cop, tramp and cyclist all rolled into one, and a very genial gentleman and story-teller he is, too.

October 5 to Be Press Day at Fair

Winston-Salem, Sept. 21.—Tuesday, October 5, will be Press Day at the big Winston-Salem and Forsyth county fair.

At 12:30 on that day the newspaper men of North Carolina will be the guests of the hotel Robert E. Lee at luncheon on the roof. The marine roof garden of this hotel is one of the show spots of the state and the hotel management is anxious for every newspaper man in North Carolina to see this popular resort. As a convention hall, banquet hall and dance pavilion it is without equal anywhere in the south. It is decidedly popular with Winston-Salem folk and the weekly dances and other festivities have added much to the social life of the tobacco city for the past several months.

Following the luncheon on Tuesday, October 5, the visiting newspapermen and their ladies will be taken to the Forsyth county fair grounds where they will be the guests of the management on an all-day tour of the various attractions and entertainments. Every detail of the big fair will be completed by this opening day and visitors will not only see the splendid exhibits in the agricultural buildings, but will be entertained on the midway and the race track. Here they will see the big outdoor free circus acts as well as the fast works. At night they will see the big musical revue and the fireworks, the whole making a day of sight-seeing that the management of the hotel and fair ground believe will be a high spot in the lives of the guests.

Invitations have gone out to this of those invited to attend. Entertainment and it is expected that seventy-five or more newspaper men will be present for what is hoped will be an annual event.

Yesterday and Today Meet on Ocean Highways

The paths of two eras of ocean transport cross off the shores of Bermuda, both products of the American genius for speed. The full-rigged sailing ship Seven Seas, survivor of the swift fleet of clipper ships that carried the American flag all over the world, required 10 days for the trip from Newport to Bermuda. The Bermuda Clipper covers the same distance in a matter of five to six hours.

Armed Venus

Watch your step, Jimmy! This modern Venus, has arms! Jimmy Dunn and Astrid Allwyn in a scene from Columbia's "Venus Makes Trouble", showing Wednesday at the Carolina theatre. Hitler Book Leaves Vienna Cold

Vienna (P)—Reichsfuehrer Hitler's book, "Mein Kampf," put on open sale here for the first time since the Nazi party was declared illegal, isn't having the success in Austria that people hoped, or feared, it would.

For one thing, the Germans expected that a cheap edition, which even the poorest could buy, would be permitted. It wasn't. Again, no advertising is allowed in its behalf.

The Linzer Volksblatt declared that "Mein Kampf" would not be the dangerous propaganda Austrian officials for four years feared it would be. The newspaper said people could now realize the book had been written so long ago that much of it didn't apply now, and that they could find plenty of things in it that were not true.

Two Jewish booksellers told The Associated Press they were stocking the book. One regarded it as stock in trade. The other feared that if he did not carry it Nazis might break his show windows.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

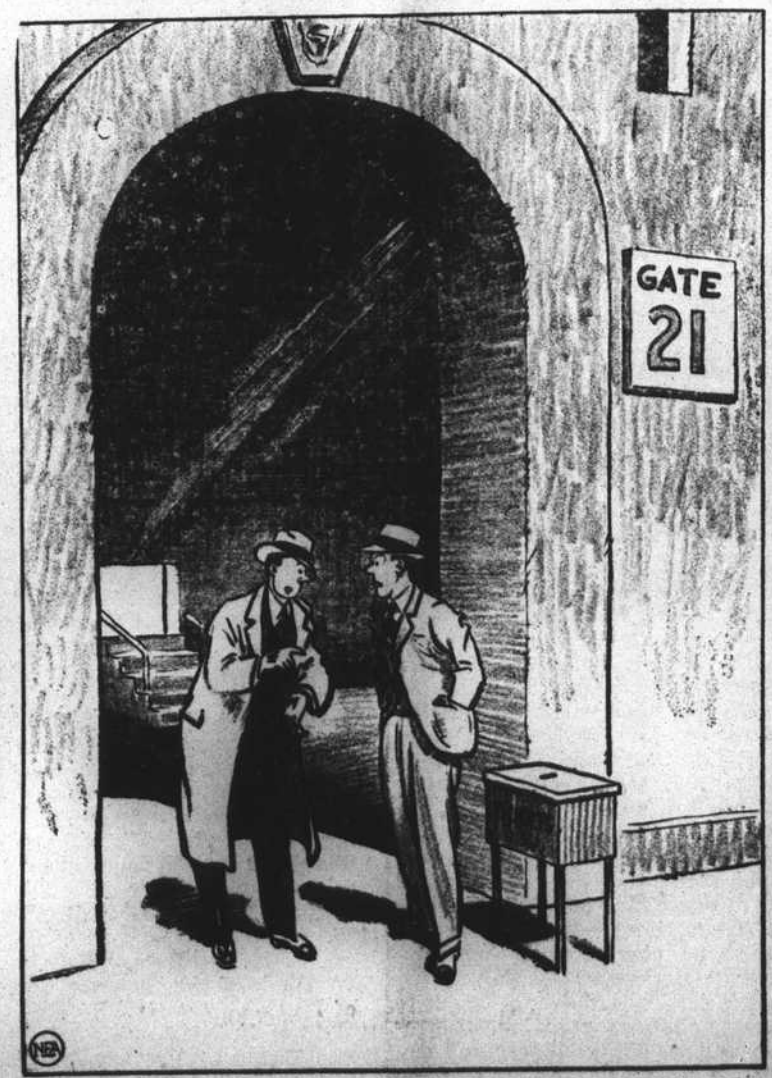

WHEN THE WORLD WAR ENDED, THE UNITED STATES HAD ON HAND 419,000 MUSTARD GAS SHELLS, EACH CALCULATED TO PUT OUT OF ACTION EVERY ONE WITHIN FIFTY YARDS OF ITS EXPLOSION.

SINCE THERE WAS NO PLACE ON EARTH WHERE THE SHELLS COULD BE EXPLODED SAFELY, THEY WERE TAKEN TO SEA AND SUNK.
