British Reporter Killed When Japan Opens New Advance

Newspaperman Dies as Japs Machine-gun Chinese Defense Positions.

Frenchmen Wounded Japanese Troops Mop Up Remaining Troops Near Village of Nantao.

Shanghai, Friday, Nov. 12.—(P)—The Japanese occupation of Shanghai was completed early this morning. The last Chinese troops who held out since the major part of the defensive troops withdrew Tuesday, retreated from Nantao, the native section.

Shanghai, Nov. 11.—(P)—Japanese forces spread fire, death and destruction along the northern border of the French concession today, mopping up the last Chinese defending the Shanghai sector along the Nantao water.

Watching the spectacular battle from the French concession sidelines, a few yards away, Cambridge Stephens, reporter for the London Daily Telegraph was killed by a hail of Japanese machine gun bullets.

Two French tramway employees and two French police and a number of Chinese were wounded by wild bullets.

Tonight blazing fires battled Nantao and Pootung. A Japanese attack with tanks, artillery fire and shock troops broke Chinese resistance along the western boundaries of the sector after three days of day and night conflict.

Armistice Day Is Observed At Chapel

E. O. Schaefer, Senior Warden of Good Shepherd Church, Conducts Service.

At noon today, several citizens gathered at Pugh's chapel for the Armistice Day service held by the Good Shepherd church. The group was composed of members of the local Legion, Auxiliary, War Mothers and others who participated in his service.

The service itself was brief but most impressive, being a combined memorial to the dead and a prayer for future peace. E. O. Schaefer, senior warden and lay-reader, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. R. S. Shannonhouse, conducted the service in an impressive manner.

The chapel was decorated for this occasion with large American flags, white crosses, symbolic of the sacrifices made by American soldiers, and red and white flowers, which added further to the effectiveness and spirituality of the service.

Governor To Make Radio Talk Soon

Will Make Series of Talks For Carolina Orphanage Association; 3:30 Sunday.

Raleigh, Nov. 11.—Governor R. H. Roy will deliver a 15-minute radio address over station WFMY, Raleigh, beginning at 3:30 p.m. Sunday afternoon, November 14, under the auspices of the North Carolina Orphanage Association.

Arrangements have been made for a state-wide radio hook-up through the Charlotte, Greensboro, Winston-Salem and Asheville radio stations.

Governor Roy will appeal to the citizens of North Carolina in behalf of the annual Thanksgiving offering for the orphans of the state.

The Governor will be introduced by Mrs. W. T. Boat, Commissioner of the State Board of Charities and Public Welfare.

ARMISTICE DAY . . . 1937 . . . 1918

Slowly and with measured tread a sentry paces before the simple tomb on the heights of Arlington where rests in honored glory an American soldier known but to God. Little pomp or ceremony disturbs the quiet and peaceful spot across the river from Washington where others carry on the Republic for which the Unknown Soldier died. Only on Armistice Day, November 11, does the steady stream of those paying tribute to his memory rise to a flood.

Newly-risen among the green trees of the Forest of Compeigne, a marble figure of Ferdinand Foch today marks the spot where 19 years ago stood his railway car when, as Allied commander-in-chief, he received the German delegation which came with their petition that the fighting cease.

World War Veterans Guest Speakers In Local Schools

Invasion Of China Supported By Jap

Envoy Guest Speaker At Group Meeting at Chapel Hill; Raps Communists.

Chapel Hill, Nov. 11.—(P)—Yakichiro Suma, counselor of the Japanese embassy in Washington, said in an address last night that Japan's present program in China "is a determined effort to quarantine war in the East."

He said "misgovernment in China is to be corrected. Our ends are peace and order, not territory or concessions." His appearance here was sponsored by the Carolina Political Union, a student non-partisan organization which has asked the Chinese legation to send a speaker to present Chinese case at a later date.

Mr. Suma spoke before a large audience of faculty, students and townspeople in Memorial hall. A native Japanese and active in his country's diplomatic service for the last 18 years, he was introduced by Dr. D. H. Buchanan, member of the University Economics department who spent several years in the Far East.

The Japanese diplomat declared that most of the recent anti-foreign agitation in China has been financed and encouraged by the Nanking government and has not been a spontaneous outburst by the people themselves.

Exempt Bonds May Face Tax Penalty

Incomes From Federal and State Securities Being Considered For Taxes.

Washington, Nov. 11.—(P)—A house-packed sub-committee disclosed today the possibility of increasing taxes on those who receive incomes from tax exempt securities.

Chairman Vinson (D-Ky.) said no decision was made on any item. The proposal on tax exempt securities would bring revenue from some $56,000,000,000 of Federal, state and municipal securities in the tax picture.

Randolph's Flag Colors Used at Memorial Today Has Been Used In Two Wars.

An interesting bit of history is interwoven into the story of the flag which centered the decorations for Armistice Day service at noon in Pugh's Chapel by the congregation of the Church of the Good Shepherd.

This large American flag was of romantic and historic interest from its very origin. It was during the Spanish-American war that two young ladies living in the handsome old Dicks home in Randleman bethought themselves of a pleasant way to pass the summer. With little entertainment offered outside the home, it was decided to make a flag.

This was no slapdash decision, nor act that was engaged in for their own amusement. Their self-imposed task in a business-like manner, getting correct specifications, materials that would not fade, patterns and the like. And so, they sewed and sewed, for the flag is a very large one and made for a flag pole.

After tedious work, the flag was at last ready for a formal flag-raising, held on the Dicks lawn on the fourth of July—the day after the Battle of Cantigny.

Patriotism then was quite the thing, and not only did the flag serve as the center of attraction for this event, but all during the war as the fallen heroes were sent home, their rude pine coffins were draped softly and tenderly in this flag—symbolic of their service.

As long as the Dicks home was maintained, the flag flew on all patriotic occasions, then when the home was broken up, the flag came to Asheboro with one of the owners—Mrs. Hal Worth, whose generosity is responsible for the use in the chapel today. It was Miss Claudia Dicks and Mrs. Worth then Miss Laura Stimson, a niece of the Mr. and Mrs. Dicks, who made this flag.

Since coming here, it has always appeared on the Worth porch on patriotic occasions. Not only that, but during the world war when Company K—Randolph's own boys—were feted, this flag was always the background. This flag has entwined in its folds so much tender history of the past, so much pathos and pride, that it is a fitting honor to tender the absent heroes and an inspiration to the living—a symbol of war, and future peace.

America's Unknown Soldier Rests In Hallowed Ground

The Daily Courier today publishes the third and final story in a series pertaining to the burial of America's Unknown Soldier in Washington November 11, 1921.

These stories were written by Kirke L. Simpson, a member of the Associated Press staff. Persons desiring copies of the two preceding stories may obtain them by applying at The Daily Courier office.

(From Night Report, Friday November 11, 1921)

Washington, November 11.—(By The Associated Press.)—Under the wide and starry skies of his own home-land America's unknown dead from France sleeps tonight, a soldier home from the wars.

Alone, he lies in the narrow cell that guards his body; but his soul has entered into the spirit that is America. Wherever liberty is held close in men's hearts, the honor and the glory and the pledge of high endeavor poured out over nameless one of fame, will be told and sung by Americans for all time.

Scrolled across the marble arch of the memorial raised to American soldier and sailor dead, everywhere which stands like a monument behind his tomb, runs this legend: "We here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain."

The words were spoken by the martyred Lincoln over the dead at Gettysburg. And today with voice strong with determination and ringing with deep emotion, another President echoed that high resolve over the coffin of the soldier who died for the flag in France.

Great men in the world's affairs heard that high purpose reiterated by the man who stands at the head of the American people. Tomorrow they will gather in the city that stands almost in the shadow of the new American shrine of liberty dedicated today. They will talk of peace; of the curbing of the havoc of war.

They will speak of the war in France, that robbed this soldier of life and name and brought death to comrades of all nations by the hundreds of thousands. And in their ears when they meet must ring President Harding's declaration today beside that flag-wrapped honor-laden bier: "There must be, there shall be, the commanding voice of a conscious civilization against armed warfare."

Out there in the broad avenue was a simple soldier, dead for honor of the flag. He was nameless. No man knew what part in the great life of the nation he had filled when last he passed over his home soil. But in France he had died as

Britain's Ceremony Called "Hypocrisy" At Cenotaph Rites

Winter Weather Is On Our Heels

Cold weather is just around the corner. There is no question about this, and the statement did not come from any Weather Man. It came from wild geese as they passed over Randolph county this morning traveling south. The geese not stop, but hurried on toward their southern destination. They did give five or six warning squawks enroute, to warn Randolph folk to get in their wood, cover up out-door things, attend to their automobile radiators, and other winter preparations.

Roosevelt Leads Nation's Eulogy

Ceremony at Arlington As Pershing Arrives Home Without Celebration.

(By The Associated Press) Men who fought in the last war and men who may in the next, led the celebration of the 16th anniversary of the Armistice in many lands today.

In Arlington Cemetery, President Roosevelt paid tribute to the nation's world war dead with the traditional observance of two minutes of silence before the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

He stood bareheaded before the marble dome while aides placed wreaths of flowers and army bugles sounded taps.

The President made no address but Daniel J. Doherty, national commander of the American Legion said the memory of the nation's world war dead could best be served by the "atonement of enduring peace."

Assistant secretary of war, Louis Johnson, cited the war-like atmosphere and bloody conflict in Spain and China as "who can say in the midst of such international chaos that we may never be called upon again to defend ourselves."

General John J. Pershing arrived in New York on the liner Washington without ceremony and without fanfare, in strange contrast to his return to this country after the war, when his name was on every lip and his approach to the city was the signal for a wild celebration.

Balanced Budget Hits More Snags

LaFollette Advocates More Federal Spending to Halt Business Loss.

Washington, Nov. 11.—(P)—The administration's pledge by Secretary Morgenthau to a program of curtailed expenditures to balance the budget ran into today a Congressional demand for increased spending.

Senator LaFollette (D-Wis.), a spokesman for the self-styled liberal bloc and a supporter of President Roosevelt declared additional spending was "necessary to end the downward spiral" in business. He advocated increased taxes to finance it.

His suggestion was directly counter to Secretary Morgenthau's speech in New York last night in which the treasury head sought to reassure business.

Violet Velvet Favored

Paris.—(P)—Princess Karam of Kapurthala, the young East Indian beauty, wears one of the short bouffant evening gowns designed of violet velvet. It is lengthened in the back with two long ends falling from a huge puffed bow at the waistline.

G. O. P. Falls

Chicago, Nov. 11.—(P)—The Hamilton club, a Republican citadel for two generations, surrendered today to bankruptcy.

Edward Shuns Day; Was "Insulted" By St. George Pastor

Former Monarch Called "Man Who Could Not Defend Himself" in Paris.

George VI Disturbed

Former Asylum Inmate Yells Down British Service; Threatened King.

London, Nov. 11.—(P)—An escaped asylum inmate fought to the King's guard today with a cry of "hypocrisy" and shattered the two minutes of silence of Armistice Day's tribute to the British war dead.

King George, standing rigidly at attention before the solemn Cenotaph ignored the disturber, who shouted:

"All this is hypocrisy—you're deliberately preparing for war." Queen Mother Mary and Queen Elizabeth, watching from a Home Office window, looked on agast.

With hands uplifted and, clad in a raincoat, the middle-aged man dashed through the line of sailor guards a few feet to the right and rear of the Monarch.

Guards scuffled on the pavement and placed hands over the disturber's mouth. Apparently unconscious, he was carried quickly out of the crowd and taken to St. Stephen's hospital for medical observance.

He was identified as Stanley Storey, who escaped September 21. While the Legions of today marched in London and Paris, statesmen in Brussels awaited Japan's answer to its plea for peace in the Far East.

Italy observed its own Armistice Day last Wednesday. Germany did not celebrate.

The former Kaiser in his Doorn exile ignored the anniversary. The French observed the day with a great military review, centering about the Arch de Triomphe, combining modern troops with the World War fighters in a mighty display of military power.

Duke Insulted

Paris, Nov. 11.—(P)—A pastor apologized today to the Duke of Windsor for "an insult" to a "man who could not defend himself", but the Duke, nevertheless shunned an Armistice Day service within St. George's here because his presence was declared unwelcome.

The pastor, the Rev. J. L. C. Dark, explained that he expressed wish that the former British King and former head of the Church of England attend and told the British Legion:

"The very last thing I wished to do was to insult a man who couldn't defend himself. Reporters made me do that. There was nothing further from my intentions. I swear to that."

Dictatorship In Force In Brazil

Constitution Thrown Out With Senate; Power Now Centralized.

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 11.—(P)—Brazil today promulgated a new constitution—her second in four years—with the avowed purpose of concentrating authority in the hands of President Getulio Vargas and his cabinet and insuring internal peace.

The new constitution, replacing the one which inaugurated the second Brazilian republic in 1934, dissolved the senate, chamber of deputies and all state and municipal legislative bodies.

Hosts on Way Here

Cannes, France, Nov. 11.—(P)—Herman Rodgers and his wife, hosts to the Duchess of Windsor when she first went to France from England during the abdication crisis last December, sailed from Villefranche today for New York.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 11.—(P)—Officers of the United Daughters of the Confederacy announced 39 new college scholarships today at the opening business session of the 44th annual convention.
