ANTI-STOCK LAW.

A Large Meeting Yesterday.

A large gathering of people, from all sections of the county, responded to the call for a meeting to take into consideration the action of the joint meeting of Magistrates and Commissioners, on the 1st inst., in reference to the Stock Law question.

The meeting was organized by the election of Esquire Howell, as Chairman, and Thos. J. Candler, as Secretary.

Capt. Matt Atkinson, in response to a request from the Chairman to explain the object of the meeting, spoke at length. He reviewed the action of the Legislature, charging that our members had violated pledges made to the people in passing the Stock Law act, and that the Magistrates and Commissioners had violated their solemn duty and trampled upon the rights of the people in refusing to hear and determine the petitions of the people against the law in those townships, where the Statute gave them the privilege of being exempted from its operations.

Mr. Pearson was then called for. He responded also at length, explaining his course on the question, and showing that he had redeemed his pledge made on the stump during the last campaign. He characterized the action of the Commissioners and Magistrates as a flagrant violation of the rights of the people and the spirit of the law. He was in sympathy with the people in their desire for redress from the wrong, but he wished to be understood as not joining in any denunciation of the Legislature, or the Democratic party, or any other body. He thought such a course improper, and one that he could take no part in, if such was intended. He spoke as a citizen and a Democrat, who desired simply that the rights of the people should be respected, and favor such action as would secure that end.

By the Constitution, all political power is vested in the people and derived from the people, and all government is based upon the will of a majority. He was opposed to considering any matters here, except the condemnation of this arbitrary action, and the adoption of the proper redress of this grievance. That the right of petition, and the right of the majority of the people to regulate their own affairs, are possessions more valuable than cattle, and more precious than land they are rights for which the best blood of the ages has been shed like water.

Capt. McLoud and Jas. H. Merrimon, were called for, and both made elaborate speeches. They, too, wished to be understood as taking no part in anything of a political or personal nature, and not knowing what would be the character of the resolutions introduced, they both stated that they had no favor or sympathy for any resolution denouncing the Democratic party or anything else. They discussed the question from a legal standpoint, and concurred in the general opinion that the people's right to be heard, had been denied, they hoped unintentionally. They gave what they thought to be a proper and safe construction of the law, and advised the appointment of a committee to wait upon the Board of Commissioners, and request that another meeting of the Magistrates be called for the purpose of considering these petitions, giving it as their opinion, that such a course would be lawful, another meeting held, and their petitions heard and granted.

Mr. Thos. J. Candler, then offered a set of resolutions, which attacked the Legislature, denounced the present system of County government, the Magistrates and Commissioners, and proposing to form a new party, &c. As a substitute for which, Mr. Pearson offered the following:

The people of Buncombe county, irrespective of party organization or political affiliation, have assembled in mass meeting to condemn and protest against the action of the Board of Justices and Commissioners on the 1st inst., and do declare that the attempt of said board to deliberately force upon the people of certain townships of this county the law known as the No Fence or Stock Law, against the express will of a large majority of the good citizens of said townships, is an arrogant flagrant usurpation of power.

The refusal of said board to receive or listen to the respectful petitions of many hundreds of our best citizens, is a violation of the inherent and constitutional rights of the people.

We declare the action of said board to be unwise in that said Stock Law is unsuited to unenclosed and unutilized mountain lands.

We declare it to be undemocratic in that it thwarts and subverts the will of a majority of the people.

We declare it to be unnecessary in that the townships where the law is absolute are in no wise affected by the adoption or rejection of the law in the outside townships.

We declare it to be despotic and revolutionary in that it defies the will of the people, tramples underfoot the sacred right of petitions and strikes an avowed blow at the essential principles of free government, principles as old as the Anglo Saxon race, as dear as the cause of liberty and as enduring and sacred as the everlasting Rock of Ages.

On motion, the substitute was adopted with the following amendment:

It is resolved further, that this meeting of the people of Buncombe county, denounces those members of the Legislature that passed the "no fence law" against the known wishes of a majority of the people, as unworthy of public trust, and that we will never support any candidate for the Legislature who is not known to be in favor of the repeal of the aforesaid "no fence law"; also who are not in favor of the repeal of the present system of county government.

On motion this was unanimously adopted. It is due Mr. Pearson that it should be stated that his substitute was amended without his acceptance, and that he does not endorse the amendments, and did not vote for them. Neither Pearson, McLoud or Merrimon took any part in the discussion of resolutions, and neither of them voted on their adoption.

PROGRESSIVE RAILROADING.

A SPECIAL DAY TRAIN OF PULLMAN DRAWING ROOM CARS TO BE PUT ON THE W. N. C. R.

R.—DOUBLE TRAINS, THE SCHEDULES AND CONNECTIONS.

The importance of the Western North Carolina Railroad as a summer travel route has been steadily on the increase, until now the managers of the road have found it expedient, and even necessary, to double its transportation facilities. Not alone has this been decided upon, but a special service of Pullman drawing room cars, that are made, has been secured, and hereafter a special day train of Pullman cars will be run between Asheville, Salisbury and Goldsboro, in addition to the regular passenger train between Salisbury and Asheville, thus giving the Western North Carolina a double daily passenger service.

The new train will make its first run next Sunday, and from that date the schedule on the Western North Carolina road will be arranged according to the table here-with given:

No. 1, leave Salisbury at 2:45 a. m. No. 2, arrive at Salisbury at 12:35 a. m. No. 10, arrive at Salisbury at 5:20 p. m.

Nos. 1 and 2 are the new trains of drawing room cars, and run between Goldsboro and Salisbury, and Salisbury and Asheville. Nos. 9 and 10 are the regular passenger trains, with Pullman sleepers, and run between Salisbury and Asheville. Nos. 1 and 2 connect at Salisbury with the morning train No. 50 coming South on the Richmond & Danville road. No. 9 connects with the morning train No. 51 going North, and No. 10 connects with the evening train No. 53 going North.

Under the new schedule Round Knob Hotel will be the breakfast station for passenger on No. 1, dinner for passengers on No. 9, and supper for passenger on No. 2. Hickory will be the dinner station for passengers on No. 10. As the accommodations for tourists in Western North Carolina have increased, it has been found the number of tourists has increased accordingly, and it is predicted that the wondrous "Land of the Skies" will this summer be filled with more visitors from all parts of the United States than ever before known. The mountains will be fairly alive with tourists, all of whom will this season find better railroad and hotel accommodations than heretofore.—Observer

"THE MODEL WOMAN."

A SERMON YESTERDAY AFTERNOON TO WOMEN ONLY.

Four Thousand Ladies Gathered at the Tabernacle to Hear Dr. Munhall in a Sermon, Which Men Were Not Allowed to Hear—What the Doctor Had to Say—Etc.—Etc.

(From the Atlanta Constitution.)

Dr. Munhall offered a short prayer and announced that his subject was THE MODEL WOMAN.

He said, of course you won't suppose that a man as old as I am has a model of his own to present to the hundreds of ladies gathered here. I am too old and too wise for that. But I call your attention to God's own model as you find her described in the 31st chapter of Proverbs, commencing at the 19th verse. Nearly that entire chapter is devoted to the praise and properties of a good wife.

There is an old proverb that he that labors is tempted by one devil and he that is idle by a thousand. Another, that evil thoughts intrude themselves as naturally into an unoccupied mind as worms are bred in a stagnant pool. Lord Bacon once said: "Much bending breaks the bow, and much unbending the mind."

These proverbs apply just as well to woman as to man. Woman needs to be occupied just as much as a man does. "A girl or a woman that is raised in idleness, is no better than a young man raised the same way, and she is just as much subjected to temptations. I don't mean that it is necessary for a woman to take in washing, or to go out and cook, though that is honorable when it is necessary. But a woman who does not know how to do these things is not a lady in the best sense. We are getting to be a rich people. This is now the wealthiest nation on earth, and there is a tendency among us to luxuriousness in living, and there is a sentiment that makes it unwomanly and unladylike to do any kind of work with her hands. That is of Satan; because, if you train up a girl in idleness, you may depend on it, she will be no better than a young fellow that is trained up in idleness. There are too many young ladies, particularly in polite society, with the idea that they need not do anything with their hands but

THUMP THE PIANO and catch a husband who has plenty of money. There is more mischief in such a sentiment than any other that I could mention. Such an atmosphere is the ruin of a woman. Every young lady ought to have something to occupy her hands and heart and mind. Young women ought to be taught prudence. As I go about my heart sinks with in as I see the giddy antics of a great many girls. At the railway stations and elsewhere they giggle and flirt, and I wonder where the mothers of the girls are that they are allowed to run loose in such style. Hundreds of girls have gone to ruin in that way. You are not cursed with skating rinks here in Atlanta. I hope you may never be. You can't pick up a paper without seeing an account of an elopement, and a skating rink flirtation is at the bottom of it. There needs to be a more careful watch over girls than there appears to be in many quarters. And then there is a great deal of mischief that comes through fashion. Little children are dressed up like grown folks and sent to parties when they should be in bed—their education is all in the direction of extravagance. When I was a boy, a girl of sixteen was considered the embodiment of modesty. She was called sweet sixteen. If a gentleman spoke to her, the blood would mount up to her face. She was the impersonation of modesty. But I tell you a sixteen year old girl don't blush much now when a man speaks to her. A great many of them can stare a man out of countenance before they are sixteen. They flirt on the street with this man or that boy. I tell you the mothers of America need to keep their girls out of society until they get older, and much of the

SO-CALLED SOCIETY they should be kept out of altogether. Children need to be kept as children. Once there was a period in a girl's life known as girlhood, but that has disappeared.

They are little children and then they are women. They are children still for all they know. The American woman is the highest standard of beauty, but they soon fade, for they are not raised on exercise. The English women take a great deal of exercise, and in old age they are robust and well preserved, with rosy cheeks. The American woman does not even dress with a view to health. There ought to be a lot of walking clubs organized in Atlanta. The girls are moping and complaining before they are twenty five. I am glad they practice callisthenics in the schools. That is a good thing. Children ought to be brought up to take exercise. I thank God my father put me at the blacksmith's trade—I worked at it three years. I never was sick, and don't intend to be. It is a wish to be sick. This body is the temple for the indwelling of the Holy Ghost, and it ought to be kept in good condition. You can't do it if you read novels all day long and dance all night. The model woman, according to the text, was domestic. Now you would be amused at the letters I have received this week making suggestions to me about what to say to the women. Woman's place is in the home.—There she reigns as queen—some don't. The man that goes off from home to the saloon or hotel, or lodge and stays all night, is just the meanest sort of a man, but I don't blame some of them. Sometimes the wife don't make home what it should be. She ought to see to it that the house is the best spot for her husband this side of heaven. If she does he will find it out. If he comes home don't you fret, and he ought not to fret when you are at outs. You ought to make the home tidy, and you can't do it unless you know how yourself. The girl who is taught by a governess, then goes to college and learns to bang her hair and bang the piano and reads novels, won't be satisfied with anything but a duke for a husband, and she waits for the duke and the duke don't come, and she is an old maid or else she marries Charles Augustus, and he don't know any more than she does, and they get up a big wedding with a heap of style and cheap silkenware presents, and they settle down to what? The wife hasn't got sense enough to entertain her husband, and the husband, as soon as the honeymoon is over joins the club, and that is the story of four-fifths of the divorces. The woman ought to make herself companionable. The pair ought to know enough to entertain each other. Now I could say something to hundreds of men, but I'm not talking to men to-day. The text praises the benevolent woman. The hand of beauty is the hand that gives. The preacher devoted a few words to a war against slander and tale-bearing. The model woman, he said, was a wife and mother.—He also spoke of the custom of giving wine to young men, denouncing the practice and saying it should not be done.

Published by Request. How He Came to "Swear Off." "No, I won't drink with you to-day, boys," said a drummer to several companions, as they settled down in the smoking car and passed the bottle. The fact is, boys, I have quit drinking—I've sworn off." He was greeted with shouts of laughter by the jolly crowd around him; they put the bottle under his nose and indulged in many jokes at his expense, but he refused to drink, and was rather serious about it. "What's the matter with you, old boy?" sang out one. "If you've quit drinking, something's up; tell us what it is." "Well, boys, I will, though I know you will laugh at me. But I'll tell you all the same. I have been a drinking man all my life, ever since I was married; as you all know, I love whisky—it's as sweet in my mouth as sugar—and God only knows how I'll quit it. For seven years not a day has passed over my head that I didn't have at least one drink. But I am done. Yesterday I was in Chicago. Down on South Clark street a customer of mine keeps a pawn shop in connection with his other business. I called on him, and while I was there a young man of not more than 25, wearing threadbare clothes and looking as hard as if hadn't seen a sober day for a month, came in with a little package in his hand. Tremblingly he unwrapped it, and handed the article to the pawnbroker, saying, 'give me ten cents.' And, boys, what do you suppose it was? A pair of baby shoes, little things with the buttons only a trifle soiled, as if they had been worn only once or twice. 'Where did you get these?' asked the pawnbroker. 'Got 'em at home,' replied the man, who had an intelligent face and the manner of a gentleman despite his sad condition. 'My—my wife bought them for our baby. Give me ten cents for 'em—I want a drink.' 'You had better take the shoes back to your wife, the baby will need them,' said the pawnbroker. 'No—she won't, because—because she's dead. She's lying at home now—died last night.' As he said this the poor fellow broke down, bowed his head on the show case and cried like a child. 'Boys,' said the drummer, 'you can laugh if you please, but I—I have a baby of my own at home, and I swear I'll never drink another drop.' Then he got up and went into another car. His companions glanced at each other in silence; no one laughed; the bottle disappeared, and soon each was sitting in a seat by himself reading a newspaper.—Chicago Herald.
