Plague of Yellowjackets, Musquitoes

and Gnats-A Sleepless Torture. On the following morning we were early in the saddle, and trouble began almost immediately. The woods were on fire around us, and we occasionally found ourselves hemmed in by flame and blinding smoke; smouldering trunks lay across the trail, and half-burned stumps left treacherous pitfalls in our

Nests of yellowjackets were met with every few hundred yards, their revengeful inmates swarming out upon us with relentless fury. The horses were stung to frenzy, and snorted, kicked, and finally stampeded in reckless madness, until brought to a standstill by a barrier of logs, where they crowded together, trembling with terror. Nor was this a temporary experience, but was repeated at intervals of ten minutes throughout the day. We were thus in constant danger of having our brains dashed out against the trees by the maddened breasts. The pack animals seemed to suffer most, and kicked off their packs with charming regularity about every hour.

By dint of a vigorous use of the ax in clearing the trail, we reached the Mishawl river, a distance of five miles, in four hours. Four hours more of vigorous work took us six miles further, to a small brook running into the Nisqually, and by nightfall we had traversed seventeen miles from Mishawl prairie, and gladly pitched our camp on a grassy bar of the main Nisqually.

We all needed rest and refreshing sleep, but were denied either, for no shot so disorganized the battery that it sooner had we unpacked our animals than we were assailed by myriads of small black gnats and ravenous mosquitoes. The gnats were simply irresistible; one could not breathe without integrated the battery that it sooner had we unpacked our animals limbered up and wheeled away to cover. While heavy ordnance is necessary in reducing forts and earthworks, it is doubtful if there was any profit in the work of the big guns carried by the iron-specific and any of the usual neans. We anointed ourselves with mud, buried our heads in effect of the awful crash and terrific exour blankets, and tried to snatch a little sleep, but all to no purpose. The gnate crawled down our backs, filled our hair and ears, eyes and noses; and, in short, reade us so utterly wretched that not one of us closed our eyes in slumber the whole night through. This was a poor preparation for the fatigues and hardships of the following day, but we were destined to suffer the same sleepless torture for some succeeding nights before escaping to the upper region of frost and snow.-George Bayley in Overland Monthly.

Wolves in England.

Ancient chroniclers state that King Edgar attempted to extirpate the wolves in England by commuting the punishments for certain offenses into the acceptance of a certain number of wolves' tongues from each criminal, and in Wales by converting the tax of gold and silver into an annual tribute of 300 wolves' heads. In subsequent times their destruction was promoted by certain rewards, and some lands were held on condition of destroying the wolves which infested the parts of the kingdom in which they were situated. In 1281 these animals troubled several of the English counties, but after that period our records make no mention of them. The last wolf known in Scotland was killed in 1680, and in Ireland one was

The wolf in these islands was hunted by an animal known under various appellations as the Irish wolf dog, the Irish greyhound, the Highland deerhound, and the Scotch greyhound. There appears to be no doubt that all the dogs thus denominated were essentially of the same breed. Its driginal home is supposed to have been Ireland, whence, during the proud days of ancient Rome, it was frequently conveyed in iron cages to assists in the sports of the city on the 'Tiber.-Chambers' Jour-

Cutters in the Channel.

A veteran naval officer suggests that the relative merits of the sloop and cutter type will not be settled until one of our sloops conquers in English waters. He says the performances of cutters in the rough seas and thrashing winds of the British channel and narrow seas are really wonderful, and confirm him in the belief that they are the best rough weather boats he has ever seen in nearly forty years' service in all quarters of the globe. - Boston Transcript.

The Use of Smoke-Bockets. Smoke-rockets are now largely used by those who have to make inspection of sanitary arrangements. These consist of paper cases filled with a composition which gives off a vast quantity of smoke at considerable pressure. The smoke test can never be taken-when it gives negative results-as an absolute test for drains, but it is more efficient and trustworthy, when promptly applied, than the orthodox peppermint test,-Chicago Herald.

QUEER HAPPENINGS IN WAR

Lettery in Which the Prizes Are Shot,

Shell, Wounds and Death. Men might write for 100 years of the curious phases of war, and still leave the subject fresh. War is a lottery, and the prizes are shot, shell, wounds and death. Tens of thousands of men served four years in the late war and returned home. In 1,000 cases recruits were killed within twenty-four hours after reaching the front. War's missiles are no respecters of persons, and the soldier who fights an all day's battle without receiving a wound may be killed in his tent at night by the accidental discharge of a musket. At the battle of Franklin the first shell sent from the first field-piece to open fire killed twenty-six Confederates. The next five shells from the same gun either failed to explode or cleared the advancing lines. In this same fight, the horse of a Confederate colonel was cut square in two by a shot, and the rider escaped unhurt. Ten minutes after a Union officer behind the breastworks stumbled and fell forward on the ground, breaking his neck.

In one of the assaults on Fort Wagner. in Charleston harbor, the iron-clad fleet, assisted by land batteries numbering twenty-seven heavy cannon, bombarded the fort for two hours before killing a single soldier. From seventy to eighty heavy cannon were hurling three tons of iron into the fort each minute, and yet no one was hurt until over 300 tons of "solid death" had been wasted. As an offset to this, witness the work of a single solid shot thrown from a Federal gunboat on the lower Mississippi. A Confederate flying battery was just taking position, and one piece had already opened fire. The Federal shot was aimed at this piece. The big mass of iron struck the six-pounder square on the muzzle and upset gun and carriage. A twenty pounds, was broken, and this flew to the left and killed two men.

Three men were hurt by smaller fragments or flying splinters. The big shot next struck and exploded a caisson, killing three men and wounding two others. ing three men and wounding two others. From the caisson it turned to the right, killed a horse, smashed a wheel of a field-piece, and crushed the leg of a sergeant to a bloody mass. That one shells thrown over the heads of our troops into the woods by these great cannon amounted to no more than 100 men. They were a new thing then, and the plosion on the men was demoralizing on

A Union gunboat on the White river threw three shells into a Confederate camp, killed nearly fifty men, and routed a force of 800. Within a week after that event the Confederate Gen. Shelby planted four pieces of flying artillery on the levee, within 400 feet of the same gunboat at anchor, and without the least cover for men or guns kept up the fight for over an hour, or until the gunboat backed out of it and steamed

The chances in a lottery can be figured down fine, and a nertain percentage of escapes is allowed in a steamboat explosion; but he who goes to war has nothing to console him. He may dodge a 200-pound shell and be killed by two buckshot. He may receive a dozen bullets and live on, or the first may be fatal. He may ride in the wildest charge unhurt, and he may be killed by a stray bullet around his camp fire, -Army Bul-

The Throat and the Voice. The throat is a wonderful instrument of music. Place the fingers upon it, and every time you speak you can feel the vibration of the vocal organs, producing sound. Anything that even touches the Fling a cloth over the strings of a piano can. So every cloth which surrounds the throat impairs the sweetness of the voice. Women go with necks bare; men have theirs swathed and bandaged, and ten women have sweet voices where one is shaved and choked. God has provided a covering for man's throat, light and soft; it clothes the neck and preserves the health. But a man gets a sharp iron, scrapes his neck, ties a rag round it, takes cold, has sore throat, bronchitis, consumption, and dies. - Christian Advo-
