OLD FRIENDS.

There are no friends like old friends, And none so good and true, We greet them when we meet them As roses greet the dew. No other friends are dearer, Though born of kindred mold, And while we prize the new ones, We treasure more the old.

There are no friends like old friends Where'er we dwell or roam, In lands beyond the ocean Or near the bounds of home. And when they smile to gladden, Or sometimes frown to guide, We fondly wish those old friends Were always by our side.

There are no friends like old friends To help us with the load That all must bear who journey O'er life's uneven road. And when unconquered sorrows The weary hours invest, The kindly words of old friends Are always found the best.

There are no friends like old friends To calm our frequent fears When shadows fall and deepen Through life's declining years. And when our faltering footsteps Approach the greater divide, We'll long to meet the old friends Who wait the other side.

Living Within One's Income.

"Father, will you please lend me a dollar?"

"Yes, Carl. But, my son, this is the second this month. Is not your allowance large enough? I will increase it willingly, but I want you to learn to live within your means."

"I know, father, and I do try. As you know, I never borrow of anyone else."

"It would be fine to have more, but I do not need it. I spend too much the first of the month on luxuries, and find I need something for necessities at the close. I do not run in debt, so what can I do but come to you to advance some on my next month's allowance?"

"You do just right about that. It is a great comfort to know that you run no bills, and apply to no one else for assistance. Be careful not to overdraw, for you will get into bad habits which you cannot cure when you have money to control. Here is a little statement I found long ago:

"Income, $1; expenses, 99 cents. Result: Riches, affluence. Income, $1; expenses, $1.01. Result: Poverty, bankruptcy."

Sermon short for the text, but strong and to the point.

Mr. Cameron was called away. Carl stood studying the slip of paper. When he turned away, he had decided to discipline himself.

Your Hair

"Two years ago my hair was falling out badly. I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and soon my hair stopped coming out." Miss Minnie Hoover, Paris, Ill.

Perhaps your mother had thin hair, but that is no reason why you must go through life with half-starved hair. If you want long, thick hair, feed it with Ayer's Hair Vigor, and make it rich, dark, and heavy.

50¢ a bottle. All druggists.

If your druggist cannot supply you, send us one dollar and we will express you a bottle. Be sure and give the name of your nearest express office. Address, J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Putting the Bits Together.

She was a dear, quaint old lady whose days were full of kindness, and whose hands were seldom idle. She was showing some treasures of handiwork, and among other things brought out a soft, silken quilt, daintily stitched and finished.

"Why, auntie, you did not make this whole pretty slumber robe out of just those odds and ends of silk you were gathering?"

She nodded and laughed.

"There are bits enough in the world, child, to make almost anything we want, if only we are willing to save the bits and take the pains to put them together," she said. "The reason for most of our doing without is that we want our material all in one piece—yards and yards of it so that we can lay on any pattern we like and cut it out easily. But it doesn't come that way usually."

"Strength, leisure, money, education—we seldom get any of them in the lengths we want, but putting the bits together will work wonders if only we learn how to do it. 'Slumber robe?' Is that the new name for this kind of quilt? Well, the happiness robe is made in the same way, out of the bright little odds and ends that come to us daily."—Forward.

Drudgery That Made Genius.

Paderewski, when told by her royal highness, Princess Victoria, perhaps the most accomplished musician of all the royal family, that he was "surely inspired," answered:

"Your royal highness will, I dare say, be surprised when I tell you that I remember the day when I was quite an indifferent player. I was determined, however, to be what the world calls a genius, and to be a genius I well knew that I must first be a drudge, for genius and drudgery always go hand in hand."

"Genius"—said Paderewski spoke excitedly—"is three-quarters drudgery that's what genius is. I at one time practiced day after day, year after year, till I became almost insensible to sound—became a machine, as it were. Now Paderewski is a genius," says the world! Yes, but Paderewski was a drudge before he was a genius!"

Churches in the Philippines.

The American Bible Society has received from its agent in the Philippines, the Rev. Jay C. Goodrich, his annual report on the situation in the islands, inclusive of the circulation of the Bible. He says, among other things:

The missionary forces have been greatly augmented. The Baptists and Presbyterians on the Island of Panay are reaching many of the rural people at the market places, where they congregate from miles in the interior, and are greatly interested in the teaching of the Bible. Dr. Hall has a hospital at Iloilo, and is proving that medical missions are profitable in spiritual results. At Dumaguette the Silliman Institute, under the direction of the Rev. Mr. Hibbard, is well established with a growing attendance.

The United Brethren Church has established work at Vigan, on the northern part of the Island of Luzon, with headquarters at Manila.

The Disciples Church has two representatives in Manila, where English work is under way. Work among the Filipinos will begin shortly.

The Methodist Episcopal church has opened work in Hagonoy, Bulacan Province, in San Fernando, Pampanga Province, and Gerona, Tarlac Province, all on the Island of Luzon.

Lesser things will drop out as the hand closes upon the larger duty or the greater blessing, just as the hand that reaches out to grasp the great strong oak lets go its hold on the blade of grass it had gathered.—Phillips Brooks.

Whether any particular day shall bring to you more of happiness or of suffering is largely beyond your power to determine. Whether each day of your life shall give happiness or suffering rests with yourself.—G. S. Merriam.

MR. CLEVELAND'S FALSE POSITION

IN SAYING THAT PROTECTION BREEDS TRUSTS.

Former President Cleveland is Again Trying to Commit His Party to "Tariff Reform" as Its Leading Issue.

In the course of his speech before the Dave Hill harmony meeting in New York last night Mr. Cleveland made this remarkable statement:

"No one doubts today that a high Protective Tariff has proved the 'parent of trusts,' just as was predicted it would."

We call this a remarkable statement because it was made by an honest man who told a deliberate untruth. We say "deliberate" because his knowledge is too broad and his prominence too great to admit of any other conclusion.

Mr. Grover Cleveland cannot cite a single fact in the industrial history of the world to prove that the Protective Tariff is the "parent of trusts," and no one knows it better than he does, for great knowledge of ancient history is not necessary to become possessed of the facts of industrial development.

The ancient world knew little about aggregated capital. Plato, in his laws, ordered a citizen to be punished if he attempted to concern himself with trade. Augustus is said to have condemned a Senator to death because he so degraded himself as to engage in manufacture. Rome obtained her wealth by means of the Tammany plan, by plunder and not by production. England knew little of aggregated capital until within three centuries.

In the close of the sixteenth century England began to feel the spirit and effect of association of persons and capital. Her people formed trade combinations or trusts, and as Daniel Webster declared in one of his magnificent speeches, "England became a power to which Rome, even in the height of her glory, was not to be compared."

The first trusts ever organized in the world came into existence in Free-Trade England. For years trusts have flourished there, and when several years ago public protest was made against such combinations of capital Hon. William E. Gladstone said:

"You might as well endeavor to stay the formation of the clouds, the falling of rains or the flowing of the streams, as to attempt by any means or in any manner to prevent organization of industry, association of persons and aggregation of capital to any extent that the ever growing trade of the world may demand."

Mr. Cleveland, undoubtedly knowing these facts of history well, has the monumental gall to stand before a great audience of American people and make an assertion which he knows is absolutely false, and yet he denounces William J. Bryan as a demagogue.

Free-Trade England is the birthplace of trusts and Mr. Cleveland knows it. Trusts are being organized in England today and Mr. Cleveland knows it. He also knows, as everybody else knows, that there is no Protective Tariff in England, and yet he brazenly tells the people of this country that the Protective Tariff, which had not been even thought of when trusts were born, is the father and mother of trusts.

The gloom and blight of Cleveland Free-Trade began to fade when the advance agent of prosperity—William McKinley—was elected to the Presidency. The people have not forgotten that gloom and that blight. Mr. Cleveland had better go away back and sit down.—New Haven Ledger.

NEWSPAPER COMMENT.

Economy is a good watchword. But it must mean something. In this country, where the people's business is transacted in the open, and a public accounting is necessary, and always as searching as the people require, a party asking power on promises of cutting down expenditures must render a bill of particulars. If this is not a billion dollar country, just how much should suffice to run it, and how should the smaller amount be divided?—Washington Star.

It is not clear what the senate democrats will do in the short session. Perhaps Gorman will come over and lead them from the cloak rooms. But it is quite certain that they can make no further use of young Mr. Bailey, of Texas. He might lead a lynching party or a cowboy expedition to paint a frontier town, but the democratic party in the senate is a touch beyond him.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Inspired, no doubt, by the illustrious example of Statesman Bailey, of Texas, Statesman Carmack, of Tennessee, has intimated, in more or less parliamentary manner, that John C. Spooner is a fool and a parrot. Statesman Carmack is mistaken about that. Not admirable in all things, no man in the senate is less subject to the imputation of folly or lack of initiative than John C. Spooner. It may be added, for the information of Statesman Carmack, that the history of Spooner warrants the assertion that in personal disputes he is by no means a non-combatant.—Chicago Chronicle.

SMILES

Agreed.—Edna—He's just crazy to marry me! May—He must be.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Will (approvingly)—"Gee! That's a dandy toy automobile." Eddy (proudly)—"I should say so! I made it run over Sister Sadie's doll, and it broke her head the very first time!"—Puck.

"Your son will be a comfort to you in your old age," remarked the visitor. "If that boy turns out as he promised," said his father, "I won't have any old age."—Detroit Free Press.

What's the matter with Jones? Why? He goes along as abstractedly as though he were drunk and were seeing double. He is. They have twins at his home.—Detroit Free Press.

A small boy in one of our district schools, when asked by a kind old lady if he studied hard, said: "Oh, I don't hurt myself at it." "Oh," said the old lady, "you must study hard or you will never be President of the United States." "No, ma'am," cried the boy, "I don't expect to be; I am a democrat."—Petoskey Lyre.

A Sad Case.—"They say his father disinherited him because he married beneath him." "Yes. Her people were nothing but college professors and preachers. His father owned three sawmills in Michigan and Wisconsin, and besides I believe had large railroad interests. Isn't it queer how badly the sons of most of our great men turn out!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Mrs. Wickler—Did you ever see how all the necessities of life have gone up? Wickler—No, they haven't all gone up.

Well, I should like to have you mention one thing that hasn't gone up. Certainly. My salary.—Brooklyn Life.

IS AFRAID TO VENTURE OUT

THE "WASHINGTON" OF THE FILIPINOS IS A COWARD.

He Will Be Given No More Protection Than Any Other of the Filipinos—Will Visit After Nightfall.

Manila, July 6.—As a result of the proclamation of amnesty July 4 the guard of American soldiers has been withdrawn from the house where Aguinaldo lived in Manila and Lieutenant Johnson, Aguinaldo's custodian, brought the Filipino today to see General Chaffee. It was the first meeting between the American general and the leader of the Filipino revolution. Lieutenant Wm. E. McKinley of the Ninth cavalry, acted as interpreter.

Aguinaldo was told that he was free to go anywhere he pleased and General Chaffee asked him if he had any complaint to make of American discourtesy or harshness. Aguinaldo replied that he had no such complaint to make. He told General Chaffee that he was going to visit friends at his home in Cavite, in Cavite province, and inquired what protection the American authorities would afford him. He seemed afraid to venture out. General Chaffee replied that Aguinaldo would get the same protection as any other citizen.

The former Filipino leader then asked General Chaffee to prevent the courts from requiring him to testify in civil suits. General Chaffee replied that he had no authority to grant this request, and advised Aguinaldo to make a social call upon Acting Civil Governor Wright. This Aguinaldo said he would do, but that he would go at night as he was timid about appearing on the streets in daylight.

The release of the former Filipino leader has renewed speculation as to possible vengeance upon him by friends of Luna and his other enemies. Luna was a Filipino leader whom Aguinaldo caused to be killed in 1899.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY

No One Man Made It and No One Man Can Umake It.

No man ever made the Republican party. No one man ever formulated its political doctrines, fought its battles, won its victories or established its greatness. And no one man can ever make the Republican party cut loose from its traditions, recant its beliefs, violate its solemn pledges, reverse its policies and deliberately plunge to destruction and oblivion. Stick a pin right there.

She Republican party believes in the doctrine of Protection to American industries—not Protection to some of them at the expense of others, but genuine Protection to all in the interest of the entire people. It is primarily owing to its economic policy, and its legislation and its administration, and to the energy which this dogma in the Republican creed has fostered and promoted, that the United States have attained such a proud and prominent position among the nations. It is surely owing in no small part to its solemn pledges, its faithful observance of them and its brilliant accomplishments in this direction that the Republican party won its well-nigh impregnable position in the confidence of the American people. Stick another pin there.

The Republican party has achieved greatness because it has merited it—because its mission has been patriotic—because its beliefs and its practices have been positive and affirmative—because its policies have resulted in placing the United States in the front rank of nations and have given to the American people prosperity such as no other nation on this earth has ever enjoyed. The Republican party has achieved greatness because it has never allowed itself to be seduced from the fundamental truths of its political creed, nor enticed from its well-defined aim by reasons of mere temporary expediency. It has never been influenced by half-way bugaboos nor mugwumpian hysterics.

Under no circumstances has the Republican party walked open eyed into pitfalls laid, perhaps unconsciously, by conceited fools, nor deliberately given help to those who sought its undoing, or desired, even unwittingly, to give the country's prosperity a black eye. And never, no never, has the Republican party allowed itself to be bulldozed and coerced into abandoning its traditions, forsaking its creed, reversing its principles and inviting destruction.—Chatham, N. Y., Republican.

CORONATION IN MID AUGUST

King Edward's Satisfactory Progress Causes This Announcement.

London, July 7.—King Edward will be crowned between August 11 and 15. His recovery has been so rapid and satisfactory that the above decision was arrived at today. No official announcement of the fact has yet been made. The pageant through the streets and the ceremony at Westminster Abbey will be much curtailed from the original plan. Their majesties will drive from Buckingham palace to the Abbey through Mall to Whitehall and thence to the Abbey, the same route as taken at the opening of parliament.
