SENATOR HALE DISCUSSES THE FISHERIES TREATY.

A Tiresome Talk About Tin Plate, to strike out the entire paragraph. in the House.

SENATE.

By Telegraph to the SUN.

Hale called up Mr. Morgan's resolution as to the fishing treaty and proceeded to protection for tin manufacturers. address the Senate in behalf of the subliving anywhere in the United States and be made. But the duty at 22 1-10 cents taking interest in public affairs who was not considered. That out of the existing for five years and then she could compete conditions should come and the establishment of the rights of his fellow citizens, who are engaged in fisheries. He, Mr. Hale, did not propose to assail The future of the South was bound up in detail the provisions of the treaty as unsatisfactory, illusionary and comparatively valueless, as they all were. His colleague, Mr. Frye, had done that in a most thorough and efficient fashion; but this year on the basis of the Mills' bill. the treaty was a failure and must needs to have been. Failure was inevitable, because neither the administration nor negotiators had been able to seize or take | done. He gave as his conviction that the desire of Canada to have American markets opened free to their fish was at the bottom of all the trouble.

At the close of Mr. Hale's speech a resolution to postpone further action till Monday, the 25th, was passed, and the Senate resumed consideration of the resolution offered by Mr. Stewart, calling for a statement of the sales of bonds since April the 1st, 1888; the question being on Mr. Cockrell's amendment to add after the word "names" the words "other than private parties."

Mr. Cockrell, in speaking to his amendment, read a letter written last April to secretary of the treasury, asking that the committee on mines and mining, of before the infant was born. This was which Mr. Stewart is chairman, should be furnished daily with a detailed statement of bonds offered and accepted. The treasury department has complied with journed. the request, and ever since the 17th of April the Senator from Nevada had had a complete statement before him. Why did the Senator insist on having the names of persons offering bonds? There must be a reason for it. He would now withdraw his amendment and leave to the Senate itself the responsibility of adopting the resolution.

The motion to refer to the committee on finance was rejected.

The discussion for some time took a political turn. The resolution was then adopted without modification and without division. Mr. Blair moved to take up the Senate bill for the adjustment of accounts of laborers, workmen and mechanics, arising under the eight hour law. A vote by The negative votes were all given by democrats and the affirmative by republicans; the latter being joined by Messrs. Call and Turpie. As there was no quorum voting the roll was called.

A motion to proceed to executive business was made by Mr. Butler, and defeated; yeas 14, nays 16. There was another roll call, showing the presence of the afternoon advance to the small proa quorum, several senators, however, being paired; but another vote on the motion to go into executive business also failed, and there was more useless voting. The Senate, at 4:20, adjourned.

House went into committee of the whole, Springer in the Chair) on the tariff bill. Mr. Bayne, of Penn., moved to strike from the free list sunn, sisal, grass and other vegetable substances. Motion defeated.

Warner, of Mo., moved to strike from the free list burlaps, (when not exceeding 60 inches in width) of flax, jute or hemp. Rejected, after a very brief discussion.

McMillan, of Tenn., moved to place on the free list bags of jute for grain. A long debate resulted upon this motion, into which a good deal of politics entered. Dingley, of Maine, opposed the proposition to place jute bags on free list, on the ground that it would be destructive to manufacturers in this country of cotton bagging. Biggs and Thompson, of California, earnestly supported the motion, contending that the placing of jute bags on the free list would not interfere with the manufacture of cotton bagging, but would be greatly beneficial to the grain producing population of the Pacific

This was rejected, as well as a motion

The next paragraph was read (tin plate) and Dalzell, of Penn., moved to strike it out.

Another general tariff debate sprung WASHINGTON, D. C., June 13 .- Mr. up on this paragraph, Dalzell opening it with a 15 minutes speech in favor of Randall said the real question-was, could we produce tin plate here profitably? We could, and he had seen it Mr. Hale declared that the fishermen If properly protected, and the natural plate would decrease here. We should let the wage earner of the United States produce what he could produce. It went further-it touched iron ore and limestone and other products; all going to make tin plate. We had long enough drained the country of $16,000,000, annually paid out for tin plate. We took threefifths of the British product, and he, Randall, was opposed to favoring a foreign country at the expense of our own. [Applause on the republican side.] Wilson, of West Virginia, produced an old record and had read, (a decision in the Senate between Senators Sherman and Ingalls,) in which the last named gentleman vigorously protested against the protection of the infant tin industry received with a round of applause on the democratic side. Offering was free, partly as an effort to further weaken the market and partly to freedom of the demand finally overlapped offerings and a small reaction followed, on which there was a recovery of 2 points. The position appeared to show a pretty good weeding out of the tired long interest, but the main feature has been the reappearance of American spinners who bought 3,131 bales since last night. These free sales naturally checked the decline as they became known. Exporters also bought a small line of 200 bales. The demand is principally for better grades and is rapidly reducing the balance of our stock here to less desirable cotton.
