WHAT WAS DONE VESTERDAY IN THE HOUSE.

Two or Three Appropriation Bill Amended and Passed.

WASHINGTON, D. more of a Foraker boom than a Sherman boost, but no one can seperate the shouts for the Senator from the enthusiasm for Foraker.

Senator Quay, of Penn., who was at work for Sherman until the small hours of morning comes into the convention hall with a weary and anxious air. The Pennsylvania delegation is hard to handle and there have been stories current all the morning that the Harrison people have succeeded in making a strong impression there, and it is openly boasted that Quay cannot hold his men for Sherman longer than three ballots and that most of the Fitler vote will go to Har rison after the first ballot. But with all the talk and chatter and nods and winks Ut bnowing once, whe think they have the straight tip, the convention meets with no now known prophet to solve the problem before it. The men who are seeking to prevent a great Blaine stampede at the start, but who are equally anxious to prevent the nomination of any other man, are watchful but nervous and anxious. They possess the sympathy and at a critical moment would have the support of the Chairman, whose voice nearly gave out yesterday, in his effort to quell the pandemonium which followed Foraker's appearance.

The deleagtes do not come in promptly but this was anticipated. They are being wrestled with or are themselves engaged in missiouary work, while the leaders have been seeking to get together and agreeupon some satisfactory ticket. The big floral emblem inscribed with the legend "no rebel flags surrendered while I am Governor," which appeared along with the Sherman-Foraker demonstration of yesterday, has been removed from the convention hall stage where it was placed yesterday. It may serve its purpose at some future time.

Pressure for admission to the hall on outsiders is so great that its influence can be felt in the auditorium room itself, as those who get in are excited over their efforts to get through the crowds and convince the doorkeepers that their tickets are all right. There has been a row between the local committee and the sub-committee of the National committee, having charge of tickets; and chairman Clarkson of the former and sergeantat-arms Fitzsimmons have had an encounter over the dispute, in which it is asserted that blows was passed. It is and resulted as follows: SECOND BALLOT.

Depew 99, Gresham.....108, Ingalls..... 16, Lincoln..... 2,Blaine...... 33, Allison...... 75, Harrison 91, Phelps...... 18, McKinley 3, During the announcement of the votes, the convention was more sedate than it has been at anytime during the session. Spectators and delegates were too much interested in the changes from the previous ballot to make any demonstration. Senator Quay had evidently done good work among the Pennsylvania delegates last night, as Sherman gained 24 votes from that State, almost all of them being votes which on the first ballot had important event of the ballot and, considerably elated, the Sherman men who had been disappointed at the vote for their favorite on first ballot.

in this convention or before it in any other capacity. After my arrival, representatives of New York, by a unanimous vote, presented my name to the convention. It was done for State reasons, in the belief that because it was only time since the organization of the Republican party that all divisions should be healed and all interests united in the Empire State, it would secure in that commonwealth the triumph of the ticket. [Applause.] Under these conditions personal considerations and opinion could have no possible weight. Since then a discussion has arisen which has convinced me that my vocation and associations will raise questions in hitherto certain Republican States which might enable the enemy obscure the great issue of future [applause] which, unless obscured in some way, will surely win us success this fall. [Applause.] The delegates had voted to continue in my support as long as ballots were to be taken but under the circumstances, after most earnest and prayerful consideration I came to the conclusion that no persona consideration, no State reasons, could stand for a moment in the way of gen eral success of the party all over this country, or could be permitted to threaten the integrity of the party in any com monwealth hitherto Republican. In our own State by wise laws and wise sub mission to them by railroad companies the railway problem has been so completely settled that it has disappeared from our politics, [applause,] but I believe that there are communities where it is still active; that there may be dan ger in having it presented directly or in directly. Under these circumstances, and after your vote was called this morning, been cast for Fitler. This was the most I called on the delegates from my own State and requested them to release me from farther service in that capacity. They have consented."

> Immediately after Depew closed his speech, Hastings took the platform and moved to adjourn until 10 a.m. to-morrow. The roll was called amid great confusion, and the motion carried.
