WATERY GRAVE.

W. A. Patton Drowned in the French Broad Yesterday.

About five o'clock yesterday afternoon news was received up town to the effect tha Mr. W. A. Patton, of this city, had been drowned in the French Broad river, near the old Fair grounds while in bathing. People at once started to the scene, some on foot, others in carriages and on horse-back. As soon as a crowd had gathered, several young men went in the river to search for the body, and when they got just a few steps from where Mr. Patton was last seen, his body was found. It was taken to the bank, where every effort was made to restore life, but with no avail. His body had been in the water about one hour and fifty minutes. Where the body went down and where it was found the water was not more than waist deep. Patton was considered a good swimmer, nue, formerly the residence of Capt. M. E.
