

DANGEROUS PLEASURES

Spartan was a great city and I once sent out three hundred horsemen in battle. They had a minister who had taught the horses at the city a great trick and when the old minister placed a certain time the horses would rear and with their front feet seem to beat time to the music. With the old minister was offended with his country and he went away to the enemy and he sold to the enemy. You give me the mastership of the army and I will destroy their troops when those horses come from Spartan. So they gave the old minister the treasure and he taught all the other ministers a certain time. Then when the enemy's troops came up when the old minister was all the time they sent down a certain time and at the last of the summer of the battle when the horsemen were to ride to the conflict the horses reared and they came to the ground with their horses and a disgrace and lost the enemy's life. All my friends I have sent against the ministers of pleasure and the ministers of dissipation. The ministers of godless associations have influenced people to the further fight to the enemy's loss. The enemy has been destroyed.

How many people in Spartan were snatched from the business into the enemy's hands. I am surprised and want to know the cause of their track and many of the glittering scenes of the world. America despises what is right and left and balance is gone. The breath of the spirit are floating through the perfume and the breath of death's up bubbles in the epilogue.

HEALTH AND WEATHER

Health does not cease in summer time. She never takes a vacation. The mind never leaves town. The devil never leaves town. The child of want, being so that dark alley has not so much fresh air nor sees as many flowers as in winter-time. In good weather the fresh breeze on the window pane and the snow falls in a wreath in the alley. I enjoy the white dress that pants and sweats and leathers and dies on the hot pavement and in the suffocating streets of the town.

Let us remember that our eye from this world will more probably be in the summer than in any other season and we cannot afford to die at a time when we are least alert and worshipping. At a summer the average of departures is larger than in good weather. The sun-stroked the doctorizes the fevers the cholerics have affinity for July and August. On the edge of summer death stands waiting his scythe for a great harvest. We are most careful to have our doors locked and our windows fastened and our "burglar alarm" set at times when thieves are most busy and at a season of the year when diseases are most active in their bargains of life we need to be ready.

The crops in the eastern and middle portion of the state are the best known for years. In our section the tobacco crop is short, but all others are fine. The corn acreage is greater than usual.
