BASE BALL IDEAS

Coming low ball playing is as much study as anything else, and in order to make a game well as good practice in home training and action upon it as you would a lesson to recite. But all boys and men are too eager to be led by experienced men who know something, and not to appeal to those who know nothing.

Seeing a game and playing are two different things, and although it may look easy to bystanders if asked to play would not know how, but in generally speaking it is best to say but little.

A game of ball need good men whose minds are on the interest of what they are doing and give two to six weeks training with a good master and not to appeal to every one but the teacher or captain of the club. After many weeks training then if we want a challenge call upon outside match, good reliable captains and abide by what they say. Play the game and not allow the players to say anything during the game. Even get an expert umpire to use his influence, and the game is doubtless a success. But if you let the players and the captains and umpires speak. It is useless to say anything, and the best is to give up the game at once and leave no impressions till we get home.

Then in a week try again, with new ideas and in a short time you will see how easy a game of ball can be played. As to expense on teams, select to bankers of moderation or some confidential man for that business have him alone during the combat of the game as it takes all his time to keep score. Society is excluded at his time and leave that to bystanders, who like their friends keep in good trim to enjoy but don't have a say so with the players while in the game. As the making of the first base is one of the most interesting experiments after leaving the bat.

Place all fielders in commanding position and let them watch every movement like heroes, and not be attracted by men of no concern to say the least, while during the game, but attend to business, and in the end that the pleasure of the game general rules in speaking all can make great demonstration and learn what they can about ball matters, and yet when

It is easier to see than to give a truthful explanation on theory, but of what we cannot explain our selves.

It is foolish to try to reason about what we do not plainly know—simply would talk.

The more you love yourself the less you will be loved by others.

It is easier to love some people than to agree with them.

REMARKS TO A GREAT SCHOOL TEACHER

Consideration worthy of notice to Key Mr. Atkins, who is the gentle man in charge, who having a social inter-nurse in a passing moment by our worthy D. F., who can safely say that it occurs to D. F.'s mind of that little he knows of school teaching, and the art of training that there are more regiments in the world known as female colleges through the sunny South and elsewhere, before our existence, and
