It is not often that a man feels happy over the prospect of spending his life in prison, yet such a one was Adolph Reich, the convicted wife murderer, when he started from New York for Sing Sing. So grateful was he for the commutation of his death sentence that he craved and was granted permission to say good bye to the five condemned murderers confined in the Tombs-Giblin, Packinham; Lewis, Carolin and Carlton. These farewells were very affecting. Then came his last good-bye to the keeper and the warden. As he was placed in the van he cried: "This is the happiest morning I have had for two years." He was taken to Sing Sing on the eight A. M. train.

During the past year 22 railroad con pan'es in this country, with 3270 miles of lines, $54,029,200 of funded debi and $ 2,785,700 of capital stock, passed into the hands of receivers. These figures are larger than those for 1887 or 1886 and smaller than those for 1885 or 1881, in which atter year an enormous amount of railway liquidation was effected, receivers being appointed for over 11,000 miles of road, represented by nearly $715,000,000 of funded debi and stock. Of the failures for the year, four roads furnished 77 per cent. of the mileage and 87 per cent. of the funded debt and stock. They were the Missouri, Kansas and Texas with 1611 miles and $98,000,000, the Minneapolis and St. Louis with 354 miles and $19,200,000, Mississippi the Dayton, Fort Wayne and Chicago with 258 mes and about $10,500,000, and grow upon the negroes with the indulthe Cincinnati, Washington and Baltimore with 281 miles and $41,340,000. been greatly exaggerated. even now. He is convinced that sooner or later Britain will have to submit the question of the Russian advance on India to the arbitrament of the sword. Like many Englishmen, he is doubtful, very doubtful, of the result. Mr. Villiers regrets that England did not clutch Turkey when she had the chance to do so, not because of the added wealth that the Turkish possessions would give to Britain, but because of the splendid qualities of the Turkish soldier. In his appreciation of these qualities, he agrees with every war correspondent who has Napoleon said of the British army: "Give me these men with French officers, and I shall conquer the world." So of the Turkish soldier, Villiers says: "Give me this fighting material, under British officers, and the advantage to us would be tremendous." But the Turkish soldier is not wholly dependent upon his officer. "I have seen them," said Villiers, "when their leaders were shot down, continue to press forward with irresistible fury. Facial Expressions of Workers. A man's occupation or condition has a good deal to do with making his facial expression. Intellectual pursuits, like studies or the scholarly professions, when coupled with temporal and moral habits of life, brighten the face and give a person a superior look. Magnanimity of nature, or love of studies and arts, will make a bright, glad face; but, contrary to this, a man may have a face that does not please anybody, because of a love of self to the exclusion of all others, notwithstanding his learning and worldly shrewdness. Soldiers get a hard, severe look, overworked laborers constantly look tired, reporters look inquisitive, mathematicians look studious, judges become grave, even when off the bench; the man who has had domestic trouble looks all broken up.

An example of the ludicrous side of this subject is to see a third-class lawyer stalking around a police court looking wise as an owl. The business makes the face, I say. There's the butchers face. the saloon-keeper's face, the ministerial face, the lawyer's face, the doctor's face, the hoodlum's face, all so distinct each from the other and singly, that I seldom fail to recognize those callings showing through the faces. And what city boy cannot recognize a genuine farmer on the street as a farmer the moment he Porons Waterproof Cloth.

An excellent method for preparing a porous waterproof cloth is said to be the process adopted for the tunics of the French soldiers during the Crimean War. It is as follows: Dissolve two and quarter pounds of alum and dissolve it in ten quarts of water; then dissolve in a separate vessel the same quantity of sugar of lead in ten gallons of water, and mix the two solutions. Now handle the cloth well in this liquid until every part of it is penetrated, then squeeze it and dry it in the air or in a warm room, then wash it in cold water and dry it again, when it is fit to be used. If necessary the cloth may be dipped in the mixture and dried twice before being washed. Cloth so treated, whether cotton or wool, is said to shed rain like the feathers on a duck's back, and is moreover partially fire proof. The liquor will appear curdled when the alum and lead solutions are mixed together. This is the result of double decomposition, the sulphate of lead—which is an insoluble salt being formed. The sulphate of lead is taken up in the pores of the goods, and it is unaffected by ra'n and yet it does not render the cloth air-tight; sirtight cloth does not admit of the passage of air, and is both unpleasant and unwholesome to those who - Courier-Journal.

Street Car Conductors Diz Walkers, A conductor on the Broadway line, in New York, estimates that, in collecting fares and in helping passengers on and off the car, he walks at least two miles a day.
