Strange, Indeed.

Sunday afternoon about four, while the people were lounging Dr. W. S. Moore, of New York about, as is usual when there is City, is here visiting his brother. In thing to do but walk, little Ida, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Galbreath, was playing along the level sidewalk in front of Everent's store. Several other small children were with her.

There being no apparent occasion for alarm, no one paid any attention to the little ones.

James Meadows, who witnessed all, says Ida was leading the jolly The registration books closed little party on its way toward the Tuesday. If you have neglected to bridge, and having missed the oth ers from her side, she very naturally turned while running to see where the others were.

While her head was thus turned, her feet in some way became tanspectators, the little captain of the band stumbled and fell.

Seeing that she neither made any noise or effort to rise, she was lifted to her feet; but no sooner had this been done than she stretched at full length, cast her eyes upward, The town is almost depopulated raised one hand, gasped, and in of lawyers, Messrs. The company will buy outside stock offered at a reasonable price and pay spot cash.

This is business. While the probabilities are that the plant will be located here, yet it is also only proper to presume that propositions from outside will be entertained, and the best one accepted. There are towns around here that will give them all the land needed, and it behooves the Bryson City Land Improvement Co. and other business men to give this
