FROM PUGILISM TO UPLIFT.

Outfitting Nelson's Efforts to Improve the Town of His Birth.

Battling Nelson, lightweight champion of the world, has turned civic reformer, and his energies in the future will be devoted to uplifting and improving the town of his birth—Hegewisch, Ind., land of swamps and desolation, known as the "jumping off place," says the Chicago Tribune.

He started out to do this with the same enthusiasm that led him to victory against Jimmy Britt and Young Corbett, and it is predicted that "rough house" times are in store for those conservative persons who oppose his strenuousness.

"I'll put this town in shape if I have to lay out cold the aldermen and all the prominent citizens," said the young pugilist just before he marched upon Alderman Moynihan at the head of his committee of public spirited citizens.

Nelson recently returned from a two years' fighting tour of the west, and he remarked as he alighted at the dingy station and saw the unkempt streets, the general hopeless and decaying aspect of the place, that it was no place for a white man to live in and he would get busy.

The fighter had saved money and invested it in two houses. This may have had something to do with his awakened interest. At any rate he started a quiet campaign and found many willing to join him. He did more in a day than most reform organizations do in a month.

In the afternoon he called a mass meeting of all the young blades who were pitching quilts behind the blacksmith shop. He also took in a few bartenders who were not busy, the grocer and the postmaster. He announced that the Hegewisch Improvement association was launched and had himself elected president. Losing no time he appointed an executive committee and started out to visit Alderman Moynihan. As he marched down the street at the head of his committee crowds of boys took up the trail, thinking that a fight was about to be pulled off behind Mahoney's barn. Alderman Moynihan was peacefully trying to keep cool in his office when he looked out of the window and saw the pugilist approaching.

"Don't be afraid, Mr. Alderman," said Nelson, as he pushed his way into the office. "We have just come down to give you a few suggestions for the good of this town. We are going to have a place to live in after this or know the reason why." Alderman Moynihan wriggled as the fighter's eye fastened upon him in a fixed, determined stare.

"Anything you want, Mr. Nelson; anything you want," he murmured, appeasably.

"I have a list of things here which we offer as a beginning." He unrolled a large paper and read in a solemn voice:

"A real police station, with real policemen."
"Sewers."
"Streets paved."
"Electric lights on the corners."
"A street car system."
"Better school buildings."
"A good water supply."
"Inducements to manufacturers."

"Is that all?" asked the alderman in a weak voice.

"That's enough for now," said Nelson. "Get us these and we will have the model town of the west."
"Come around tomorrow," said the alderman.

Not the Tariff.

Ambassador Whitelaw Reid said at the Fourth of July banquet in London that the prosperity of this country was due to gold and not to the Dingley tariff. Ted the stand patters.

GARDEN CITIES.

Work That Must Be Done For Town Dwellers by the Artists.

It is absolutely impossible to create a healthy race without an abundance of fresh air, says Outdoors. Seeing that it is impossible on the score of expense to convert our cities into places where a healthy community can be reared, the railroads must be utilized as never before to carry the breadwinner rapidly between his place of business in the city and his suburban or country home. Along the track of each railroad that radiates from the city a series of residential parks or garden cities should be built extending forty or fifty miles away, the more distant to be reached by express trains. These garden cities should be beautifully designed beforehand by architects who are also artists in landscape gardening.

The individual cottages will occupy not less than 100 square feet of land, or four ordinary city lots, affording a flower garden around each home. The avenues will be always curving, and the village green or city park will be a place that gladdens the eyes of all who frequent it.

A Clean City Club.

When you see a little girl or a little boy picking up paper in the streets or sweeping up the back yards in the Hull House neighborhood it is not a new kind of game in Chicago. Each child wears a button announcing its membership in the Clean City club, says the Chicago Tribune. This was recently organized by Mrs. Gertrude Howe Britton, head kindergarten at the social settlement. Here are the rules:

Pick up at least one piece of paper from the street every day.

Clean your own back yard and porch and try to interest the boys and girls next door.

Keep at least one flower in the window. Be smiling and clean yourself.

The club is subdivided into groups, each with a captain. The groups commanded by Will Dillon and Joe Seagood, six-year-olds, made the best record in cleaning up back premises. Watching them, persons of mature age became enthusiastic in the "great clean up." "Each child will report to the captain of his group, and at the end of the week we shall know just what has been accomplished," said Mrs. Britton.

Quite So.

"Your husband is so full of fun, Mrs. Newriche, he makes people fairly shriek. He is always chaffing, isn't he?"

"Yes, indeed. I tell him he is quite a clown."—Baltimore American.

The Kid Speaks.

My father's headpiece isn't cracked. Though you might think it, for a fact. He talks the strangest sort of rot. And jabbes like an idiot. I can't tell half the time what he is trying to convey to me.

But mother can and not half my—She's lived with him more years than I.

For instance, he says "men" for "then." "And then" he changes to "an" "en." With "is" for "just" and "is" for "that."

He keeps me guessing where he's at. He twists and tortures every word or so. It seems to me absurd.

And mother says he won't outgrow it because by trade he is a poet.

She says he fills the family purse by writing yards and yards of verse. Like this: "Last night 'st after tea My pa he talked me on his knee. Nen ma she luffed 'let it to him. An' 'en she said to Uncle Bill. 'Now, Wil-yum, don't you think that he is 'st as cute as he can be? An' 'en my uncle luffed: 'Ha, ha! Hee, hee! Ho, ho! 'st like his pa!'"

They sound to me like awful drud. These poems of the "an" "en" school. —Puck.

"Make Hay

while the sun shines." There is a lesson in the work of the thrifty farmer. He knows that the bright sunshine may last but a day and he prepares for the showers which are so liable to follow. So it should be with every household. Dysentery, diarrhoea and cholera morbus may attack some member of the home without warning. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which is the best known medicine for these diseases, should always be kept at hand, as immediate treatment is necessary, and delay may prove fatal.
