

BULLETS IN BATTLE.

They Play Queer Pranks at Times on Their Mission of Death.

At the battle of Peach Orchard, when McClellan was making his change of base, a Michigan infantryman fell to the ground as if shot dead and was left lying in a heap as the regiment changed position. The bullet that had hit him first struck the barrel of his gun, then glanced and struck off a button of his coat, tore the watch out of his vest pocket and struck the man just over the heart, where it was stopped by a book in his shirt pocket. He was unconscious for three-quarters of an hour, and it was a full month before the black and blue spot disappeared.

At Pittsburg Landing a member of the Twelfth Michigan infantry stooped to give a wounded man a drink from his canteen. While in this act a bullet aimed at his breast struck the canteen and buried itself in the leg of a horse. The canteen was split open and dropped to the ground in halves.

At the second battle of Bull Run a New York infantryman was passing tobacco to a comrade when a bullet struck the plug, glanced off and buried itself in a knapsack. The tobacco was rolled up like a ball of shavings and carried a hundred feet away. Directly in the line of the bullet was the head of a lieutenant, and had not the bullet been deflected he would certainly have been wounded or killed thereby. As it was, he had both eyes filled with tobacco dust and had to be led to the rear.

At Brandy Station one of Custer's troopers had his left stirrup strap cut away by a grapeshot, which passed between his leg and the horse, blistering the skin as if a red hot iron had been used. He dismounted to ascertain the extent of his injuries, and as he bent over a bullet knocked his hat off and killed his horse.

In the same fight a trooper had suffered several days with a toothache. In a hand to hand conflict he received a pistol ball in the right cheek. It knocked out his aching tooth and passed out through the left corner of his mouth, taking along a part of an upper tooth. The joy of getting rid of the toothache was so great that the trooper could not be made to go to the rear to have his wound dressed.—Exchange.

Tasted the Same.

Five-year-old Gracie had been given a lecture by her father, who warned her not to take gum that another had been chewing. She had been to the store that morning and had bought some gum. Her five-year-old playmate, Oscar, asked her for some while she was chewing it. She said, "No, my papa said that it is not right to take anything that has been in the mouth of another person." An hour later Oscar was given a penny by his mother. He bought some candy. While eating it Gracie sipped up to him and, being very fond of candy, asked in a playful tone, "Oscar, how does your candy taste?" Like a flash Oscar replied in a victorious tone, "The same as your gum did."—Boston Record.

Mothers-in-law In Dickens' Time.

Nowadays it is regarded as utterly incorrect to speak of a stepmother as a "mother-in-law." But anybody who does can plead plenty of literary authority. "Mother-in-law" was good English in this sense as well as the other in 1516, and both Fielding and Thackeray have it. "Father-in-law" is used by Shakespeare both for a wife's father and for a stepfather, and in this sense it can be quoted from Dickens and George Eliot. But the general agreement in modern times to stick to "stepmother" is a wise avoidance of confusion.

The American Accent.

There was an American once who had been so long in England that he imagined he had not only got quit of the "American manner," but had shed the transatlantic accent. He deceived many and was happy until the day of his return. "First class to Liverpool, how much?" said he to the booking clerk at Euston. "Five dollars and a half, colonel," promptly replied the clerk.—London Tatler.

Smashing a Proverb.

"I can never marry you," said the beautiful actress.
"But," pleaded the wealthy old man, "won't you make my life happy for the short years I will be here? I am troubled with a weak and faint heart." "In that case I accept you."
And yet they say faint heart never won fair lady.

Remarkable Work.

"What do you regard as the most remarkable work in the English language?"
"Well," replied Miss Cayenne, "the most remarkable work in the English language that I know of is the way some Englishmen pronounce it."—Washington Star.

Drilling Him.

"Johnny, were you hearing that little boy next door?"
"Certainly not, pa. I was just going through some maneuvers."
Who could chastise the kid after such a statesmanlike answer as that?—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Changed His Mind.

Naggsby—I thought you were never going to work for those people again.
Waggsby—I did say so, but since that time they have decided that I might come back.—Baltimore American.

A Wingless Angel.
Bilson—Jinson seems to be devoted to his wife.

Timson—No wonder. She is the most angelic creature I ever saw. Why, I believe she could even keep a girl.—New York Weekly.

A piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Liniment and bound on to the affected parts is superior to any plaster. WHY HESITATE?

An Offer That Involves No Money Risk If You Accept It.

We are so positive our remedy will completely relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish it free of all cost if it fails.

Constipation is commonly caused by weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine. To expect a cure you must therefore tone up and strengthen those organs and restore them to healthier activity.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies on our guarantee. They are eaten like candy, and are particularly good for children. They seem to act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels. They apparently have a neutral action on the other organs. They do not purge or cause other inconvenience. We will refund your money if they do not overcome chronic or habitual constipation and thus aid to relieve the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments. Try Rexall Orderlies at our risk. Three sizes, 10c., 25c. and 50c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. S. M. Maclie, Brevard, N. C.
