Some Notable Streets. The highest street in the world is Main street in Denver; the richest is Fifth avenue, in New York city; the widest is Market street, Philadelphia; and the shortest is the Rue de la Paix, in Paris. The dirtiest street is that of Tehankasi, in Nanking; the cleanest is the Via Cassile, in Seville, Spain; the most aristocratic one is Grosvenor place, in London; the most beautiful is the Avenue des Champs Elysees, Paris. The narrowest street is Via Sol, Havana, Cuba, which has a width of no more than forty-two inches.

Poor Men. A couple of Pennsylvania farmers, a man and wife, drove from their farm to the nearest railway. The man, small and bearded, sat motionless beside his wife, who tilted awkwardly on the seat, and only spoke to command. Finally the station was reached. The woman bustled in, settled her numerous bundles, and sat down. Looking over her goods and chattels, she suddenly noticed something and looking about, discovered that her husband had remained outside on the platform. She rapped sharply on the window. "Ben!" she called, pointing to the bench beside her. "Come set!"

MARRIED MEN LIVE LONG

statistical Expert has Proved That Husbands Are Better Risks Than Bachelors.

Dr. Hans Curadze, the German statistical expert, has discovered a new "barrier" between men and women. After studying the statistics of deaths and marriages he declares: "If men want to enjoy long life they should marry; if women want to grow to a good old age they should remain spinsters."

He admits that his conclusions can be established with greater certainty when the city of Berlin publishes its proposed statistical tables of widows, widowers, divorced persons and persons who secured separations at various ages, but he says that tables already available show that married women die sooner than the unmarried, whereas married men live longest.

Statistics show that the final age for all males, married and unmarried, is about forty-four, whereas for the married men it lies between fifty-five and sixty.

The fatal age for all women is about fifty, ten years more for unmarried women, and nearly ten years less for married.

Thus, if Doctor Curadze's statistics are to be believed, the woman who remains single may expect 20 years more of life than her married sister.

Marriages dissolved by the death of the wife last, on an average, ten to fifteen years, those dissolved by the husband's death usually last 20 to 25 years.

According to this the number of widowers in the average community is always considerably in excess of the number of widows. This is only one of the interesting questions which will be answered by the elaborate statistics now being collected in Berlin.

CLOCK IN UNUSUAL PLACE

Set in the Floor of Hotel at Worcester, Mass., It Has Excited Much Comment.

In the center of the lobby of a hotel newly constructed at Worcester, Mass., a large, elaborate, diamond-shaped clock is embedded in the floor. The clock is covered with a plate of glass face one inch thick and two feet in diameter. The numerals and minute marks are etched in by sand-blasting on the under side of the glass, which is held in place by strong bronze rings. The face of the clock is lighted by electric lamps, and in the evenings its luminous countenance forms the most striking feature in the hotel.

The clock is a self-winder. Its hands are driven by a spring-operated and balance-wheel-controlled train set in a recess in the floor. This recess is formed by a metal box 10 1/2 inches deep which is painted white inside. Eight inches below each numeral on the glass face is a ten-watt tungsten lamp placed horizontally. The white dial of the containing box reflects the light from the 12 lamps evenly through the dial.

A small motor operated by three dry cells at intervals of five minutes winds the spring of the clock. These cells, it is estimated, will suffice for the working of the clock for one year before a new battery must be installed. The cost of maintenance is a little while the satisfaction that the timepiece brings to the lobby lounge who may watch the minutes fly at his feet is large.

ALL HAD TROUBLE WITH LAW

Chaucer, Bunyan, Dante, and Shakespeare Among Great Writers Who Suffered Persecution.

The first great figure of modern English literature, Geoffrey Chaucer, remarks a writer in Case and Comment, the lawyers' magazine, was hounded from pillar to post by his creditors. So persistent were they that the King of England in response to a petition took Chaucer under his special protection and forbade that he should be arrested or sued by anybody except on a plea connected with land for two years.

The imperishable glory on which Bunyan's claim to immortality chiefly rests, "Pilgrim's Progress," was at least conceived in jail, and probably the "Abounding" "Holy City," "Resurrection of the Dead," together with other treatises and tracts, were also composed in the "dole" where he languished 12 years. He obtained his full release through the intervention of the Quakers and his name is included in the "general pardon" passed by the king in council in behalf of the prisoners of that persuasion bearing date September 13, 1672. Bunyan will perhaps always hold rank as one of the first among religious writers in the English language.

Accused on the strength of a forged document, and even while he was ambassador to Boniface VIII, of extorting money, the poet Dante was sentenced to make pecuniary reparation and to two years' banishment. His house was given up to pillage and his lands devastated. Three months afterward, he having neither paid the fine nor sought to justify himself, his enemies condemned him to be burned to death. Then began for Dante the "hell of exile."

Everybody has heard of Shakespeare's poaching adventures, how as a consequence of a charge of stealing deer in Sir Thomas Lucy's park he was obliged to leave his business and shelter himself in London.
