When you have something to cook on the gas stove which needs continuous stirring, bring it over and sit down, resting your feet on the rings. Making a Room Look Cool

Everybody has noticed that some houses look cooler in summer than others. Upon examination it will generally be found in the house which always looks cool and livable that for one thing there is no heavy stuffed furniture that has to be covered up each summer. No room looks cozy and comfortable with all the furniture surrounded in those tan and white striped covers that many people think they must put on in June.

Not even a room look cool and homelike with long bare windows. Instead of heavy lace curtains that must be washed painstakingly each spring, stretched on a frame and put away till fall, there may be used plain homed or hemstitched curtains made of chesecloth. They are as easy to wash and iron as a wet towel and they cost so little they can be easily replaced when they wear out.
