EDITORIAL.

Two articles appear in this issue in answer to the "Court House" article that appeared in last week's issue of the Sanford Express. We think the article in question had much better been left unwritten, unless the editor of the Express were better informed as to the conditions of the contract and exactly the work to be performed by the Contractors, yet, we do not desire to be misconstrued into taking sides in this controversy. We have no voice in it, but merely grant to the correspondents the use of our columns.

It seems wrong to express lack of confidence in the success of the Democratic party, yet we fear that its defeat in this State in 1888 is certain, and nothing has advanced and hastened it more than the present system of County government. The tone of the party has been "protect the eastern counties from the negroes," but the masses have suffered so much from "pocket magistrates" and "one man power," that they are determined to try a change. This is merely a conviction and we hope may prove groundless. Besides, it appears to us only right and proper that all of our officers from the greatest to the least should be elected by popular vote, for it secures the choice of the people by popular majority and not by party power. And it is also true that if the republican party held the power, we should be crying against the present system of government. If we are not consistent we must suffer the result.

As will be seen from the last issue of the BLADE the farmers of the county have expressed themselves in favor of the establishment of a county fair, and have pledged themselves to lend their efforts toward making it a certainty and a success. We intend at an early day to submit to each farmers' club throughout the county a plan of organization which will enable the soliciting committee of each club to make clear the condition and requirements. It is not expected that the fair will be established this year, but it can be next year and made one of the largest in the State. The best plan of organization we deem to be that of a stock company, for then every subscriber thereto acts on his own judgment and is not forced into an organization he distrusts by a majority of the profession, trade or society to which he belongs. This also gives each stockholder the privilege of retaining or disposing of his stock as he desires. And if possible, the capital stock should be made up as near equal as possible, representing every trade and profession in the county. This would secure the hearty support and encouragement of all classes. We hope our farmers' clubs will urge the matter all they can, for no industry can be established in the county that will benefit them more than a county fair.

Transposition of English. Ed. Blade:—You have no doubt noticed an article in the Sanford Express on the same page with the "Sanford Expressions," entitled "Court, its scenes and what the people of the county are busy talking about."

This article is by all odds the most nonsensical I have ever read. The man who wrote it may be able to write, but if so, the effort to indite his words exhausted his mental calibre. His article might do for a primer class in an infant school, for almost every word is correctly spelled, but simply as a spelling copy is it endurable? The author of that piece is a greater man than Judge Connor, for he presumes to criticize his appearance and his official acts. The Judge must feel awfully bad, for the Sanford Express is on the war path and every editor in the State knows what that means and every dignitary and potentate of our government quakes in his shoes when that terrible authority "publishes a piece." The picture of the Judge is a singular one. Mr. Author, did you vote for him at last election? If I did not know Judge Connor to be the gentleman that he is, the lawyer that he is, the Judge that stands pre-eminent in our State, I should imagine from the description given of him by the Express, that he was an immediate and direct descendant of Darwin's typical forefather of man and mankind.

The Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire, the French Revolution, the war between the States are not certainly entitled to as much consideration as the "Jones Cameron" case. The description of the affair in the Express is graphical and would do full honor to any school boy of seven years of age. That your readers may understand, we refer them to said paper in its issue of Aug 18th, 1887, if they can borrow or buy it. That idea of "gushing battery" is as good as it is new. No other paper has dared to use such a phrase; but who shall limit the Express? It is independent. Your readers may (if they can) imagine how Jones looked with his "battered back face." That is a new kind of face to us.

How the author of that article knew that Sheriff Black had taken a drink, I cannot imagine, unless Black, in his good nature, gave said author one himself, and if he did, shame on him that he should publish his friend and leave himself out. My dear friend, more than one attendant upon that court saw the Sheriff give you more than one drink. Deny it, if you dare. For the sake of information, we would like to ask the Express what it means by saying that man who "berently strokes his beard in silent meditation," referring to Mr. Robins or Mr. Womack. The writer cannot say which and leaves to the election of the author of said expression. The description of the members of the bar, should commend itself to each of them for I know they would like to preserve it for their children and their children's children to read till time shall be no more.

Will the author of that piece please inform the public what is meant by this sentence: "But the clock ticks on while a night in Jones' bar-room is thoroughly engaging the court." We must presume that the author knows whereof he speaks, and we are not at all curious, but we would respectfully and deferentially enquire, was it you that took our outfit from under the Court-house steps? If you did, we freely forgive you for we know by your looks that you needed it.

Will the author also please state (if he has time), what the word "fascinated" means as used in connection with L. Grimm. An anxious and inquiring public await an answer.

Will the said author also please inform us if lexicographers have determined to spell cashier with two e's? He says that G. C. Graves is that kind of a man. While furnishing this information, will the author oblige us by stating whether he refers to Webster or Worcester in spelling "ingenious" and what the thunder it means anyhow?

That idea of a "stringing tail" is novel, unique. What it means, however, this writer cannot divine. That Anglo-Saxon word used in the article is a stunner. This writer says nothing further to it, for he is becoming fearful. We always thought there was a "Court House Firm" and "Court House Ring," and now we know it, for the Express so sayeth. Who are they? Unearth them. Every sensible man knows that a lawyer at the Court House should not have the same advantages as one who resides abroad. It is preposterous to suppose such a thing. In these days of Protection the Express does right to urge the claims of Sanford, Jonesboro, Swann's Station and Manly lawyers to full and unrelieved protection. This "Court House Ring" should be busted. And long-ago would it have been squelched, save for the simple fact that neither we nor any one else can spot its headquarters. As long as our people believe in witches, witchcraft and things of this ilk, mention will be made by fools of "Court House Rings." We do not mind it, only we hate to see so much good ink wasted.

deavor to mold all dispositions alike; to yield immaterial trifles; to worry ourselves and others about what cannot be remedied; not to alleviate all that needs alleviation as far as lies in our power; not to make allowances for the infirmities of others; to consider everything impossible that we cannot perform; to believe only what our finite minds can grasp; to expect to be able to understand everything.—E.C.

COMMUNICATED.

Mr. Editor: I do not court a newspaper controversy, but on account of the desperate attempt of some one in the last issue of the Express, by misstatements and false insinuations to injure the parties connected with the building of the Court House, I think it but justice to myself that I should make the following statement:

On the 8th day of March, 1887, Mr. L. Grimm entered into a contract with the County Commissioners of Moore County, agreeing to repair and remodel the Court House according to the plans and specifications mentioned in said contract at the price of Five thousand and five hundred dollars. Mr. Grimm gave a justified bond in the sum of Eight thousand dollars to insure the faithful performance of his contract. The contract and bond is on file in the Register's office. Mr. Grimm and myself undertook to build the Court House, thinking at the time that we would possibly be able to finish it by August Term. We were disappointed in getting such material as was necessary, and consequently failed to have it completed at that time. The writer in the Express says that it will take $3,000 or $4,000 to finish it. It may do it, but we propose to finish it with all possible speed according to the terms of the contract; and had we been able to get material we would not have been behind as to the time. He says that the Court House will be inconvenient and that it has no seats in it. As to the inconvenience we did not feel that we should disregard the plans and specifications set out in the contract made with the Commissioners, and build a Court House to suit ourselves. The Commissioners in conjunction with the Justices of the Peace selected the plan, and we were instructed to build accordingly. As to the seats, I can only say we never contracted to put any seats in the Court House. The contemptible lying in regard to the ingenious silent partner is a simple pure and unadulterated lie.

Several kinds of Girls. On this interesting topic we give the following pointers to young men readers: A good girl to have—Sal Vation. A disagreeable girl—Annie Mosty. A fighting girl—Hittie Magin. A sweet girl—Carris Mel. A very pleasant girl—Jennie Rossity. A sick girl—Sallie Vate. A smooth girl—Amelia Bation. A seedy girl—Cora Ander. A clear case of girl—E Lucy Date. A geometrical girl—Polly Gon. Not a christian girl—Mettie Rodoxy. One of the best girls—Ella Gant. A flower girl—Rhoda Dendron. A musical girl—Sara Nade. A profound girl—Mettie Physic. A star girl—Matta Oric. A clinging girl—Jessie Mine. A nervous girl—Hester Ical. A muscular girl—Callie Sthenetics. A lively girl—Annie Mation. An uncertain girl—Eva Nescent. A sad girl—Ella G. A serene girl—Mollie Fy. A great big girl—Ellie Phant. A war-like girl—Millie Tary. The best girl of all—Your Own.—E.C.

Encouragement. Words of encouragement are indeed stimulative, and they never fail to strengthen the wings of ambition for a higher and nobler flight into the dazzling sky of brilliant effort. Yes, give the young and struggling a word of encouragement when you can. You would not leave those plants in your window boxes without water, nor refuse to open the shutters that the sunlight might fall upon them; but you leave some human flower to suffer from want of appreciation or the sunlight of encouragement. There are a few hardy souls that can struggle along on stony soil; shrubs that can wait for the dew and sunbeams; vines that climb without kindly training; but only a few. Utter the kind word when you can see that it is deserved. The thought that "no one cares and no one knows" blights many a bud of promise. Be it the young artist in his easel, the young preacher in his pulpit, the workman at his bench, the boy at his mathematical problems, or your little girl at the piano, give what praise you can.—Wilson Mirror.

Fourteen Great Mistakes. Somebody has condensed the mistakes of life, and arrived at the conclusion that there are fourteen of them. Most people would say, if they told the truth, that there was no limit to the mistakes of life; that they were like the drops in the ocean or sands on the shore, in number, but it is well to be accurate. Here then, are fourteen great mistakes: It is a great mistake to set up our own standard of right and wrong, and judge people accordingly; to measure the enjoyment of others by our own, to expect uniformity of opinion in this world; to look for judgment and experience in youth; to en-
