With the clearing of the skies that have been overcast so long come reports of renewed in development circles in the Virginias the Carolinas, Tennessee. Kentucky and the further South. Much of what will be done dur Py-the sommer of 1891 will rest on a firmer foundation than do some of the plans now in operation; that is to say, they will start with a better send off, more complete calculations as to probable success having been made, and beace a considerable part of the long strengle to "catch on," at the phrase is, will be done away

* This is a condition of things which should call torth the heartiest conpravalations. The South is admit lance will turn upon him and he can wonderful possibilities, but it is by no means a land that will vield the s eculator or investor a rich return with no expenditure of labor. Nature s and to do that as best he can is is duty. To this need, the Virginia Manufacturer has again and again called attention and other journals throughout the South have echoed its word. The development that is now going ou according to well defined plans should receive no set tack.
