THURSDAY, FEBURARY 11, 1892. A LADY KILLED IN MEMPHIS

Some weeks ago Memphis, Tenn. was startled over the act of one of it society young ladies, a Miss Mitchell who moved in the best circle of the city, cut the throat of one of her best friends, Miss Freda, Ward. The two young ladies were school girls to gether, graduated at one of the Highest Female Seminary's in Memphis, and seemingly were what we term chums, and were much devoted to each other. The facts in the case are rather strange.

It seems that Miss Mitchell fell in love with Miss Ward and determined, after a long courtship, to marry her, but on being informed that women could not marry women under our laws, and besides the objection of the two families interfered. She prepared to kill Miss Ward, and while she was out driving one evening wi h a friend, Miss Johnson, she met Miss Ward and sister, Miss Mitchell deliberately jumped from the buggy approached her lover, threw one arm around her neck, pulled her head back and with a razor cut her throat from ear to ear, Miss Wards sister tried to prevent the death but she al so received a slight wound in the breast.

Miss Alice Mitchell and Miss Johnson who was out driving with her have been arrested and are now
