

A BIT OF HISTORY.

DANIEL WEBSTER ONCE IN SMITHFIELD.

May 3, 1847, is still remembered by some of the old people of the town as a day of special interest to all the citizens.

Mr. Webster perhaps the most profound statesman and orator of his day, was enroute from Raleigh to Wilmington on the date above mentioned, and did really pass through Johnston county, and dined in the town at the Telfair Hotel, which stood on the Surles' (now) lot south of the court house. The main body of this Hotel was for many years the court house, and was moved from the site of the present court house to where it stood until destroyed by fire in the Winter of 1889. The Hotel Telfair was first presided over by Mrs. Abby Telfair, the mother of the late brilliant Dr. A. F. Telfair, and here Daniel Webster, Mrs. Webster and W. R. Gales took dinner, and what the writer remembers of the good old ladies of those days, who wore snow white caps and smoked long stemmed pipes, he is of the opinion that the distinguished party were well dined.

Mr. Gales of the party was editor of the Raleigh Register, organ of the Whig party of the State. But I am rambling, and must return to our interesting traveler.

Nothing of special interest occurred while passing through the county. It is remembered that Mr. Webster took great interest in everything by the road side. At Mr. Uriah Baucumb's farm he left the carriage and entered the field where some hands were plowing and examined the plows (the old cutter and dagger) and expressed his surprise that the farmers here still retained such primitive implements. I do not doubt that the school boy, whose task it has been to memorize Mr. Webster's speeches, will be anxious to know what brought Mr. Webster down this way. The writer is not positive but is of the opinion that this tour of the South was made by Mr. Webster in order to strengthen his chances for the nomination by the Whig party for the Presidency in 1848. The convention was held and Zachary Taylor, of Louisiana, a Virginian by birth and a General of the war of 1812, received the nomination.

Like Clay, Calhoun and Blaine, Mr. Webster did not reach the White House, the long cherished object of his heart, but this did not dim the lustre of his genius. No statesman, living or dead, ever made a more imperishable imprint upon the mind of the American people, or ever commanded more attention on the rostrum or in the Senate chamber than did Daniel Webster. While traveling in the north recently, the one thing of all others the most interesting to the writer was the Bronze statue of Daniel Webster on Broadway in the city of New York, beautiful with the sublime sentence from his memorable reply to Hayne: "The Union and Liberty one and inseparable, now and forever."—Smithfield Herald.
