Killed on the Rail.

At or near Hope Mills, this country, on last Saturday night, the fast mail on Atlantic Coast Line Railway ran over and killed a man by name of Faircloth, who was either sitting or lying on the track. It is stated that Mr. Faircloth was under the influence of strong drink and the verdict of the coroner's jury was that he came to his death by his own carelessness.—Fayetteville Gazette.

A Cora Job Pipe.

An exchange tells of an affair that happened in Arkansas last week in which three men were killed in a dispute over the ownership of an old cora job pipe. An oil man by the name of W. F. Crow, and his neighbor J. D. Burke began the dispute, and it ended with a bullet through the body of Crow. Clint Crow a young son of the oil man then shot Burke. The latter then shot Clint Crow and died in five minutes after doing so.—Scotland Neck Democrat.

Every item in a newspaper costs something, says a contemporary. If it is for the benefit of an individual it should be paid for. If the grocer were asked to contribute groceries to one abundantly able to pay for them he would refuse. The proprietor of a newspaper must pay for free advertising if the beneficiary does not, and it is one of the hardest things to be learned by many that a newspaper has space in its columns to rent and must rent to live. To give anything for less than living rates would be as certainly fatal as for a landlord to furnish free rent.—Press and Printer.

The alternative vote in the House on the restoration of the Blair-Allison act was made up of 112 Democrats, 15 Republicans and 9 Populists, while the negative vote was Democrats, 103, Republicans, 110. It will be seen, therefore, that the majority of the Democratic members are for silver, with the immense majority—all, in fact, except 15 of the Republicans solidly against silver. North Carolina members who voted for silver: Branch, 1st district; Woodward, 2nd district; Grady, 3rd district; Alexander, 6th district; Henderson, 7th district; Crawford, 9th district; leaving Bunn, Democrat, and Settle, Republican, as the only members in the North Carolina delegation at the national capitol who voted for the unconditional repeal of the Sherman silver law.—Fayetteville Gazette.

Appointments Under Mr. Simmons.

For the information of our readers we will give the number of offices and the salaries they pay which Mr. F. M. Simmons, the newly appointed International Revenue Collector for the eastern district of this State, has power to fill which he will do as early as possible after he has been installed in office. There is a chief clerk, who is deputy collector, who receives a salary of $1,800; one clerk at $1,600, one at $1,200, two at $1,100, one at $1,000, one at $900 and one at $800 and a messenger at $300; two stamp deputies, one at Reidsville and one at Durham, at $1,200 each; twelve divisional deputy collectors at $1,000 salary and $500 expenses allowance each; one general store-keeper and gauger at $3 a day and expenses; and about 100 storekeepers and gaugers at $2 a day.—Smithfield Herald.

A CODE OF NEWSPAPER ETHICS.

Looking to the formulation of a code of rules which should prevail in the press fraternity, M. James Irving Crabbe, late of Orlan in (Fla.) Recorder, suggests the following list. He would have them adopted by each press association, and the breach of any rule punished by a fine of $1, the fines go to the widows and orphans of deceased journalists:

1. Never put a thing in your paper about a man that you would not desire to say before his face.
2. When you know that a thing is wrong, don't say it is right.
3. If your party put up a man for office who is corrupt and venal, refuse to support him.
4. When you find that officials are using their power to favor concerns in which they (the officials) are interested, draw public attention to the fact.
5. As a rule to which there are no exceptions, "tell the truth, and shame the devil."
6. Don't flatter men and women and don't pay undeserved compliments. Not every young woman is "lovely" or "charming." The scrub journalist, who, in ninety nine cases out of a hundred, would make a better shoemaker than a newspaper man, is addicted, among other bad habits, to calling every woman he writes of "beautiful," "graceful," "lovely," etc.
7. Not every sermon a parson preaches is "eloquent;" some I have heard here and elsewhere are awful poor stuff, for a very poor good man may give a very bad sermon, and, also, not every speech made by a professional politician "is a magnificent burst of oratory." Don't misapply adjectives.
8. Don't use such stereotyped phrases as: "Ye" editor, instead of the editor. "The wee sma' hours," etc. "It goes without saying." "Hop" for ball or dance! Only a boor "hops" instead of dances at a ball or party.

Never refer to a corpse as "the remains," unless, indeed, in the case of the victim of an explosion. The "late residence" is also a very bad style.

9. Don't puff a man who brings you a plate of ice cream. Say "thank you," and let it go at that. This also refers to other eatables and drinkables.

10. Don't slop over. Don't make mountains out of mole hills. Be independent, courteous, manly, and good men will help you, live merchants will advertise in your columns, but oh, my! how the sneaks, huabugs and criminals will hate you backbite and malign you and patronize the other fellow, not because they like him, but because they think they think they are hurting you!

There! In my opinion these rules would make the nucleus of a code of newspaper ethics.—Exchange.

JUST THREE STEPS.

By Rev. R. G. Maynard.

A year or two ago a young man was hanged in a Western State. He was charged with murder, and did not deny the crime. Just before the black cap was drawn over his face he asked permission to speak. The request was granted. He called the youth as near to him as possible, for it was to them he wished to address himself.

"Now" said he, my young friends, I want to warn you against a fate like this. A few years ago I was the happiest of boys, but I was led into the habit of card playing. I soon became enthralled as I was regarded in expert. This encouraged me to gamble. Accordingly I risked money on my skill, and won. My success was such as to intoxicate me. In a little while the bottle was introduced, of which I drank freely. Such were my excesses in drink that I became careless of my gains, and was soon penniless. And what next? I must have money. The remainder you know. I was man enough to resist the temptation to rob when left alone in my poverty, but when I fell in company with my accomplices I was soon at the mercy of the tide, against which I buffeted with all my power for a time, and here I am! Just three steps to the gallows, my young friends! Hear this from a dying man—just three!—cards, whiskey and bad company! Avoid them! They ruined me."

Young men, handle burning embers rather than the social card, shun the social card, shun the bottle as the charged bomb and bad, wicked associates as the worst enemies. Keep in mind these steps.

The reading of the above lines calls to my mind the heroic stand taken by a Tennessee judge, in his charge to the grand jury, against progressive enclure. He boldly calls it gambling and therefore amenable to the law of that State and advises the grand jury to bring up bills of indictment against those society people, who indulge in the game.

A red-hot cannon ball suddenly thrown into a camp meeting could not have created a greater consternation than has been created among society bells and dudes at the boldness of the judge in calling a spade a spade. Of course they think the judge is an ignoramus, and that a spade is some other kind of farming utensil altogether; but the judge is confident that the heart of the people is with him.

We hope that the young people of our town are sensible enough to endorse the stand taken by the bench, and to avoid either of the three steps.—Scotland Neck Democrat.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurl, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my Lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman."
