O silver where, art thou? The silver question is the most prominent question of the day and every mind is trying to comprehend its meaning and ever y tongue attempting to explain its deep and important meaning. We admit that the question is tso deep and broad for our comprehension and think that many others who are raising such a howl over it ought to admit the same. We know · this much, that is we want honest money, want a dollar to be worth a dollar, and this is what we all want, each dollar to be worth the same in the payment of all debts, let them be of what ever nature they may he. If each dollar is worth its full value, then what more can we want. We want the dollar made and honest dollar, to contain the amount of silver which it take to constitute an honest silver dollar. This is our idea in brief of the whole matter.

WE notice from the Caucasian that some of its readers think its columns are heaped up, shaken down and runing over with truth, and such truth as will lead the A merican peop e through all trials of life and its effects will be felt by, the generations that are to follow us. There are many people'who get no other paper but the Caucasian, and no doubt some of them think its perfection and take in every utterance made through its columns as Bible truths, uttered by men who cannot erg. The Caucastan may be honest in its views but how far its honest views extend we cannot state. THE patriotism and beauty of the State should gather at Ra'eigh on the 20th of May to witness the unveiling of the monument to North Ca olina's 40,000 Confederate dead. It is thirty years since the, peerless Lee sheathed his sword at Appomattox, and now, while the whitewinged birds of peace whistle over the land, it is meet that we slou express our admiration in perennial bronze for those heroes who laid down their lives for our altars and fires. The Landmark says North Carelina "was the last State to adopt an or hance of secession; long before sie did so thousands of her sons were upon the tented fields. None went in before them; none came out after them; and the Old North State gave to the Confederacy-more lives than any other of the sisterhood.
