

A SELF-MADE MAN.
 France's New President, Does Not Cwe His Wealth to His Office.
 The new president of the French republic does not belong, like his predecessor, to what has been called the "grande bourgeoisie parlementaire." He is a self-made man, and his beginnings were humble enough.
 It is not, however, from politics that he has sought the means of existence, neither did politics make him his special position—they merely increased it. M. Felix Faure is from Havre. He was a merchant and a member of the Havre chamber of commerce when he was elected to the chamber, and he continued until quite recently to direct his commercial affairs while performing his duty as a deputy with sufficient credit to be called upon as far back as 1830 to form part of the government as under secretary of state for the colonies.

Since then he has several times been elected vice president of the chamber, a post which he still occupies when he was chosen, on the formation of the cabinet, for the portfolio of the navy.
 M. Felix Faure is well known in Paris, where he has lived for many years. Before he was minister of marine he occupied an elegant flat in the Rue de Lisbonne, where he gave charming fetes, the honors of which were done by Mme. Faure and her daughters, one of whom was married a few years ago. Without possessing a great fortune, like that of M. Casimir-Perier, he is, nevertheless, fairly rich.
 The new president of the republic is very tall and has a military bearing.
 Elegant and distinguished, he has a face which is at once mild and energetic, it attracts sympathy at once, and this first impression is confirmed by the cordiality and kindness of his address. A point which may be noted, M. Felix Faure is the only one of the republican politicians forming part of the government who is a member of one of the great Parisian clubs. He is a member of the Epitaphe. A few old Parisians also remember that he was their college in a little literary ceneacle, which was formed about fifteen years ago at the Restaurant Trebutin, and which was known under the name of "Les Pipards."

THE FITNESS OF NAMES.
 Circumstances Amid Which It Appears Peculiarly Striking.
 An English physician writes to a London newspaper to say that the common people in the rural districts in his neighborhood give their children such names as Gladys Irene Florence, Doris, Alma May, Hilda Evelina Clementina, Eileen Opie, Dora Vinita, Winifred Emily, Olive Ruby, Margaretta Lavina, Gladys Elsie, etc.; Norman, Archibald, Archibald Gordon Richmond, Cyril Granville, Douglas, Dennis Richmond, Stanley Vernon, Albert Victor, Cecil Claude, Cyril Dudley, etc.
 He opines that those topically names will sound very funny "in our future gentility and other maids, grocers, gardeners, coachmen, and so forth." What of it? asks the Boston Pilot.
 Why should not a waiting maid or footman be just as good a servant if her or his name be Gladys or Cyril? Here in democratic America it is not uncommon to find an Earl Jones, a Baron Smyth, or a Duke Robinson, whose fond parents invested them at baptism with these resounding forenames; and James G.
 Blaine used to tell with glee of a Boston mother who christened her son out of a fashionable novel, V. de C. Brown, the initials standing for valet de chambre, letters which surely look quite aristocratic.—N.
 Y. Sun.

The Pest of India.
 That no less than twenty-three thousand people should have perished last year in the Indian province of Bengal from snake bites shows how little progress has been made by science toward the discovery of some antidote for the poison of these reptiles. The trouble is that the poison of nearly each species seems to affect a different organ of the body. Thus the bite of a cobra seems to paralyze the lungs, while the poison of the dabala produces terrible convulsions. From time immemorial physicians of every clime and race have devoted their energies to the discovery of cures for these bites, but judging from the heavy list of casualties from this source alone in Bengal, the most highly-civilized province and possessed of the best system of medical supervision of all English colonial dependencies, it would seem that all efforts in this direction have been abortive.—N. Y. Tribune.

Meaning of the Precious Stones.
 The meaning attached to the different precious stones are as follows: The garnet is constancy; the amethyst, sincerity; the blood stone courage; the sapphire, innocence; the emerald, success; the agate, long life; the carnelian, content; the pearl, tears; the diamond, purity; the opal, sorrow; the turquoise, happiness; the malachite, prosperity.—Ladies' Home Journal.

At the point where the Mississippi river flows out of Lake Itasca it is only ten feet wide and eighteen inches deep.

The total length of railway lines open for passenger traffic in the United Kingdom at the end of the year was 11,252 mile-of double line and 8,774 mile-of single line.

THE LAZIEST MAN.
 Here Is One Whose Equal Would Be Hard to Find.
 His Manner and Appearance Arouse Curiosity and Comment Among the Others in the Hotel—A Startling Explanation.
 The stranger, a Mr. Burr, produced a quiet sensation by arousing everybody's curiosity. He came to the hotel attended by an Arab servant, who spoke only three words of English. The newcomer had ample means, evidently, and loved his ease. He had no acquaintances in the hotel and made none. He grove about considerably and lolled in the reading-room or in the vestibule in an easy chair carried by his servant. He said very little, ate in his room, smoked occasionally in public, the servant always attending and attentive to his wants.

He seldom used his legs, and never used his arms at all, carrying them both in a sling.
 This was the point over which the fancy of the observers exercised itself. They couldn't understand it.
 Nobody, of course, liked to speak about it to the man himself, and the servant, might as well have been dumb, as he spoke only Arabic.
 There was never a more completely mystified set.
 The man was burned brown, perhaps by oriental suns; he was well and carefully dressed, was never in any hurry, never surprised, never irritated, but always comfortably self-poised, at peace with all the world, and as placid as still waters that run deep.
 Everybody was certain there was something beyond all this—some romance or notable intrigue or some mystery more subtle than either; perhaps a crime of a rare eastern order, in which love and sharp blades and poison took part. It was beyond all question that he had not come out of the affair as he had endured, as both arms in a sling bore witness.

Some held to the notion that he had been hanged and revived, arriving at this conclusion by observing his habit of always resting his head on the back of his chair; some suggested Spanish witchcraft, others bulle hypnotism, but the vast majority could not agree on anything in particular, and consequently drifted in their opinions from time to time.
 Col. O., well-known everywhere, entered the hotel one day, added to the stranger, sat down beside him and conversed quietly for an hour in French. Nearly everybody, of course, knows French, but it so happened that nobody near by could catch a word of the conversation, because the two talked glibly above a whisper.
 The stranger paid his account and left the next day, and in the evening, when Col. O. called again and asked the clerk for Mr. Burr, he seemed not in the least surprised at his friend's disappearance.
 "Pardon me, colonel, but he's a singular man," somebody remarked.
 "Rather," replied the colonel.
 "A great traveler, I presume?"
 "No; he comes over from England once a year."
 "Know him a long while?"
 "All my life."
 "He's had quite an adventurous career?"
 "I shouldn't think so."
 "Well, he certainly produced a sensation here."
 "Why, pray?"
 "Oh, I mean he interested us all."
 "That's the case every where."
 "Indeed! But he hardly ever spoke."
 "That's his way."
 "We've concluded that there must have been a curious accident."
 "He never had a mishap in his life."
 "But the arms, colonel."
 "Oh, I forgot. I am so used to seeing him, I forgot how the thing impresses others."
 "What thing?"
 "I mean the way he carries his arms."
 "That's the very point, colonel."
 "Oh, I see! Why, my friend simply carries his arms in a sling because he's too lazy to carry them in any other way."—N. Y. Herald.

Identifying Handwriting.
 Dr. Bertillon, the inventor of the anthropometrical system, asserts that he has discovered a new process of identifying handwriting. It is based on the measurement of beatings of the pulse, which are said to have in everybody a different and characteristic effect on handwriting.
 The inventor enlarged specimens by photography till the letters were a foot high and the characteristic marks were seen.—N. Y. Sun.

Not So Easy.
 Mrs. Strongminded—If women would only stand shoulder to shoulder they would soon win the suffrage.
 Dr. Cuffy—But, madam, that is something they can't do, with the present styles in sleeves.—Globe-Democrat.

The first labor paper in the United States was The Workingman's Advocate. It was published by Evans Bros., two English labor reformers. Its publication was commenced in New York in 1825.
