Died Before her Mirror.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 27.—Mrs. Mary Cass, who died on Saturday night and was buried yesterday, spent the last few moments of her life sitting before her mirror.

When Mrs. Cass became ill three months ago with dropsy, and was informed she could not recover, she refused to believe it and ordered a full length mirror placed in her room. Before this she sat day after day, carefully noting the changes in her appearance wrought by the ravages of disease.

On the morning of her death, when seated before her mirror, she viewed her reflection and then calmly announced that she was about to die. She died with her eyes fixed on the mirror, and just before her death she gave orders that she be buried under a wide-spreading tree, as she had never liked the sun. She was buried in Union cemetery yesterday in accordance with her directions.

Ticket to Valparaiso.

"I want a ticket to Valparaiso."
"One dollar and thirty cents."
"You don't think I want to get it for nothing, do you?"
"Was it Valparaiso you said?"
"It was, sir."
"One dollar and thirty cents."
"Can't you see I've got my pocket-book out? Do I look like a man that's watching for a chance to jerk a railroad ticket out of your hand and run away without paying for it?"
"Say, if you want a ticket for Valparaiso—"
"That's what I want, young man, and I've told you so twice. How many times more do you want me to ask for it? You're here to sell tickets I reckon?"
"Yes, sir, and if you want—"
"A ticket to Valparaiso—V, a, l, p, a, r, i—no, a, i—"
"One dollar and thirty—"
"I know exactly how much it is, young man. I don't need to be told more than five or six times. I've traveled between this town and Valparaiso more trips than you have got ounces of brains inside your skull. I was buying tickets from here to Valparaiso when you were wearing short pants. You don't look like the kind of chap that can afford to put on airs over plain, common, every-day people. You look like some Billy sort of a brakeman that's been promoted to a conductor's job on account of a scarcity of material, and hasn't got over the swelled head yet. No, I'm not hindering anybody that wants to buy a ticket to some other town, either. I know this man standing behind me. He wants to go to Indianapolis, and his train doesn't leave for to say if it takes me till dinner time. If the railroad company can not afford to hire clerks that have got sense enough to tell an honest man from a pick-pocket or a gold brick swindler it ought to raise the price of tickets or economize by building cheaper cars and advertise for a few competent—oh, you've concluded to hand over the ticket without waiting to see whether I'm going to gobble it and run off with it, have you? Well, here's your change, and perhaps you'll know me when you see me again, young man. Morning!"—Chicago Tribune.

Living.

"How to make lives worth living?" The question haunts us every day. It colors the first blush of sunrise. It deepens the twilight's last ray. There is nothing that brings us a drearier pain Than the thought, "We have lived, we are living in vain."

We need, each and all, to be needed. To feel we have something to give. Toward soothing the moan of earth's hunger; And we know that then only we live When we feed one another & we have been fed.

From the hand that gives body and spirit their bread.

Our lives they are well worth the living. When we lose our small selves in the whole, And feel the strong surges of being Thrill through us, one heart and one soul, Eternity bears up each honest endeavor; The life lost for love is life saved, and forever.

—Lucy Laarcom.

An Object Lesson in Negro Rule.

The people of North Carolina who do not live in the negro section of the State have little conception of the indignities to which the white people are subjected where the negro is in control. Only a few days ago an incident came to our knowledge that occurred in the Summer that illustrated the spirit of the ruling powers in a leading Eastern town.

One of the most respectable ladies in Newbern had for some time had in her employ a small colored girl, who was so well treated that when she was bound out by the clerk of the court to a negro from the country, she did not want to leave her white mistress. Armed with the order of the clerk for the custody of the child, the negro man, to whom the girl had been bound called at the home of her white employer and demanded that she go home with him. The girl secreted herself and the lady, knowing her aversion to going, did not disclose her hiding place. Whereupon the negro went down to Five Points and obtained from a negro magistrate a warrant against the white lady for the abduction of the child, and placed the warrant in the hands of a negro constable who served it upon her. The lady did not attend the trial, which was held in a negro hut but sent an attorney to represent her, waive examination and give bond for the appearance before the Superior Court. When the lawyer appeared at the place of trial he found that a negro lawyer had been employed to prosecute the lady, and when he offered to waive examination and give bond for her appearance at the upper court, the negro lawyer objected and insisted that the lady should be brought personally into court. He made a violent speech and declared that her absence was a contempt of court and was intended as an expression of contempt of court and demanded that she be attached for contempt and be brought into court. The negro constable, who is a dandy of better sense than the lawyer, advised the magistrate that he could accept the bond without the defendant being brought into court, and the matter was settled in that way against the protest of the negro prosecuting attorney.

This affair created great indignation among the white people as soon as it was known, and if the advice of the negro lawyer brought into the court by the negro constable had been taken nothing could have prevented a race riot. The lady is the wife of a gentleman well known in the State.

This is the kind of "local self-government" the Radicals and their allies declare are "achievements equal to those of the Barons of England at Runnymede, in extorting from King John the Magna Charta."

The Anglo-Saxons voters of the State will not longer tolerate a condition of affairs that makes such occurrences possible, and averts the humiliation of white ladies only by the fear of physical chastisement. The white man or set of white men who are proud of such "achievements" may be white of skin but they are miserable traitors to their race and the civilization of their country.—News & Observer Oct 12 th.

Why Women Marry.

Some women marry because they want a home of their own, and they can get it in no other way.

Some women marry because they haven't the moral courage to remain single.

Some women marry because they want a little more money in their purses and a little larger credit at the shops.

Some women marry because they want to put "Mrs." on their visiting cards and the word "wife" on their tombstones.

Some women marry because a man has asked them to, and they don't like to say "No."

Some women marry for money—money and nothing else. And with it there comes responsibilities of which they never dream.

Some women marry because they love the man; because they want to be his wife, his friend and his helpmate; because they want to make him feel that there is one woman in the world whom he can love and cherish and from whom he will receive love and consideration in return; because they want to make him feel that if sorrow comes he has a sympathizing, loving friend close beside him, and in the day of joy there is one who can give him smile for smile. These are the only women worth marrying. The others are of little value and would never be missed.—Ex.

Say It.

Did you say a nice house or an ice house?
The old cold scold sold a school coal scuttle.
Some shun sunshine; do you shun sunshine?
The rain ceaseth and it ceaseth to rain.
She sells sea shells; shall he sell sea shells?
He spoke reasonably, philosophically, and yet particularly of the unceremoniousness of their incommunicability, and peremptorily, authoritatively, unhesitatingly declared it to be wholly inexplicable and unparadonable.

The sea ceaseth and it sufficeth us.
Give Grigham Grimes Jim's great gilt gigwhip.
Did you say you saw the spirit sigh, or the spirit's eye, or the spirit's sigh? I said I saw the spirit's eye, and the spirit sigh, nor the spirit's sigh.—Buffalo Evening News.

Judge Not.

Ah! pause and think, before you seek To harshly judge another. You cannot probe the inner life. You cannot note the soul's dark strife. Temptations, nor its dangers rise. Then do not judge another.

Ah me! and who should seek to be The one to judge another? Perchance a woman's fairest fame May be her pure, unsullied name. Yet slender drapes her off in shame. Thus cruelly we judge her.

It costs so little, e'er to speak In kindness of another. Had you the same temptation seen, Had life withheld its golden sheen, Perhaps less stainless you had been. So do not judge another.

Ah! life is sad enough, 'twould seem, So kindly judge another. God help us when His face we see, And death reveals its mystery, If he should judge us cruelly. As oft we judge another.—Ex.

The Rights of a Young Wife

Before every thing else the young woman has a right to expect from her husband, tenderness, sympathy and faith" says Ruth Ashmore, writing in the Ladies Home Journal of "What to expect from a Young Man." "But sometimes, in his eagerness to make all life fair to her, he fancies she is a doll, and not a woman. And a doll is a very selfish toy; it demands careful treatment all the time, and it gives nothing but a pretty appearance in return. It is the foolish wife who expects infallibility in her husband. She forgets that there is a difference between the housewife and the house mouth. She should expect from her husband politeness at all times, and a certain gentleness that every man, possessing the real instinct of a man gives to a woman. But she should not expect too much for him. She has no right to ask of him permission to live a lazy life herself, and to give up all her days and years to vain and idol thoughts. * * * When the wife can make her husband's home-coming a joy, his home-staying a pleasure and a delight, and his leaving home a sorrow, then, and then only, can she expect a great deal from him."

Consumptives Can be Cured.

New York, Oct. 15.—Professor Margliano's serum for the cure of consumption has been successfully tried in five known cases of the disease in which the Board of Health bacteriologists examined the sputum, and success has attended the trials. One case will do as a sample of all.

Giuseppe Panettiere, 25 years old, of No. 112 Houston street, contracted the disease, and his was supposed to be a helpless case. Treatment began in September. When the first injection was made Panettiere's fever was at 101 degrees. Two days later the second injection was made, and an examination showed there was no visible change in the patient's condition. But with the third injection came signs of improvement. Panettiere reported a marked sharpness of appetite and a stoppage of the night sweats. In those first six days he had, moreover, gained half a pound in weight.

But the fever remained unchanged at 101 degrees. With the sixth injection the fever entirely disappeared. Panettiere's temperature was normal again and it has remained so.

Panettiere has since made rapid improvement. The cough, which had clung to him for two years, has almost entirely ceased, his appetite has returned and his strength is increasing daily. The treatment has to be continued for one year to effect a permanent cure.
