The New Bright Tobacco Market of Eastern North Carolina.

The new tobacco market of Dunn N. C., opened on the 1st day of August with the two large warehouses well filled with tobacco, the sales for the day amounting to 60,000 pounds and the market has had good sales every day since. The market is backed up with a good corps of buyers, who have orders from some of the largest tobacco firms in the country. The town is located in the center of a large area of country celebrated for the growth of fine bright tobacco, extending for a distance of about twenty five to thirty miles in each direction, and has the brightest outlook of any of the new tobacco markets in the State. The tobaccos being marketed are of a superior character, and are well handled before being brought to market which being a new industry indicates unusual intelligence and alertness on the part of the farmers who own the lands they cultivate.

Dunn is the biggest town for its age in the State, and is also one of the liveliest towns of its size to be met with anywhere. The town was incorporated in 1887 with a population of 150, and to-day it has a population of from 1,500 to 2,000, has two large warehouses for the sale of leaf tobacco, two furniture factories, and the largest factory for the manufacture of turpentine tools in the world and another in course of construction, a turpentine still, one bank and another being organized, two cotton gins, two lumber mills, one buggy factory and six white and three colored churches.

Dunn is in Harnett county, on the main line of the Atlantic Coast Line Railway, fifty miles from Wilson on the north, and twenty-five miles from Fayetteville on the South. The aggregate of the diversified interests of the town are immense. The turpentine interest amounts to over $10,000 annually; the cotton business amounts to between ten and twelve thousand bales a year, while the leaf tobacco business, which is in its infancy, will amount to at least a million and a half pounds the present season, and will no doubt more than be doubled each year for the next three or four years.

The town is rapidly building up, and beside the industrial building being erected, numerous handsome homes are going up in different sections of the town. Among the enterprises in contemplation is a cotton mill, to be run by electric power produced from the falls of the Cape Fear river, a few miles from the town. The hotel accommodations of the town are good. Mr. Jno. A. Oates, the proprietor of the Hotel Divine feeds well and always has a nice clean room for the weary traveller.

Among the dealers of tobacco located here is Messrs. J. E. Boyd & Co., manufacturers, exporters, or any other parties in want of bright leaf could not do better than place their orders with this firm, the largest and best buyers of leaf on this market. They are good judges of the leaf, ever watchful of the interests of their many customers, and honest to the last degree.—The Tobacco Journal, Danville, Va.

[The above article was written by Mr. D. E. Graham, the editor of the Journal. Mr. Graham was here recently and visited the sales of our warehouses, and on his return home he penned the article. He is an experienced tobaccoist, and his kind words of our tobacco market and town are appreciated.—Ed.]

Meditation.

BY LULU.

For THE UNION.

They sat together, side by side,
In the summer night so fair,
He, a youth with raven locks,
While she had golden hair.

He told her he must leave her soon,
To college he must go,
And they were softly talking
In accents sweet and low.

He told her that he loved her,
He vowed he would be true,
"And all throughout my life," he said,
"I'll live for only you."

The maiden sat and listened,
A smile upon her lips,
She drank in all his words of love
As the bee the honey sips.

The parting time has come at last
He says his sad farewells,
And looking in her deep blue eyes,
His love again he tells.

"Tis long since he has left her,
The maiden sits alone,
He said it would be but months,
The months, to years have grown.

She had loved him very dearly,
She had given him her all;
A woman's life and a woman's heart,
A gift by no means small.

He through his college course did go,
And all his vows forgot,
He found that there are others
The maiden found it not.
