A Gentlewoman in Service.

Lady Louisa Stewart, an Englishwoman, writing in the first part of the last century, gives a description of a maid in her service who evidently endowed her station with a grace not inferior to that of a higher lot. The description reflects credit upon both mistress and maid.

My friend rather than servant, Cross, is soon to retire from my service, in which she has been, for eight and twenty years, one of the chief blessings and comforts of my life.

Her superior sense, clear judgment and quick decision, her elevated mind, her steadiness of principle, her delicacy of feeling would have been admired in a princess; I hardly know one of my acquaintances for whom I have so perfect an esteem.

Instead of feeling that I can rely on the integrity of the servant, I respect the honor of the gentleman; and because she is thus high-minded, she is far humbler and more easily contented than any other person I ever saw in her situation.

"O madam, what does it signify?" is her constant saying about things that would make others stand on their dignity.

No quarrels, no difficulties ever came to my ears. The servants below her are guided with a firm yet gentle hand. She has a contempt for gossiping and tattling, and she has a disinterested spirit; indeed she has such a head and heart as I do not find met together even among my equals.—Selected.

SURGEON'S KNIFE NOT NEEDED.

Surgery is no longer necessary to cure piles. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cures such cases at once, removing the necessity for dangerous, painful and expensive operations. For scalds, cuts, burns, wounds, bruises, sores and skin diseases it is unequalled. Beware of counterfeits. Hood & Grantham.

Was Not Suspended.

President Monroe's "Progress."

In Dr. Edward Everett Hale's "Memories of a Hundred Years," now appearing as a serial in the Outlook, he tells an amusing story about Monroe's visit to Harvard in 1817.

The President, as soon as he was President, the same man who "never was in trade and knew nothing about it," arrayed himself to see the commercial States, and even to cross the new-born West and show himself to the people who were creating a nation there.

In my boyhood, this journey of his, which began on the 31st day of May, 1817 and did not end until October of the same year, was called "The President's Progress." Washington's similar journey in 1791 was always called "Washington's Progress."

There is a little touch of burlesque when one reads that President Monroe arrayed himself in the old bug and blue of Revolution with an old-fashioned three-cornered soldier's hat.

There is just a touch of absurdity about this, because his military exploits were, of his whole life, the enterprises which his friends would have most gladly forgotten.

There is a good Harvard tradition which I may put in print without hurting anybody. At a meeting of the little college faculty in the year 1817, it was announced that Blank, a spirited senior, must be "suspended."

I suppose his mark were not high enough, or his attendance at chapel had been irregular. Dear, courteous, kindly Dr. Kirkland, who was the President, was supposed to be dozing in his chair as the march of college government went forward; but at this proposal to suspend Blank he roused to life and activity.

"Send away Blank, when Monroe is coming? Who will command my Harvard Washington Corp when the President visits the College?" The Harvard Washington Corps was the military establishment of the college boys at that time. Dr. Kirkland could put his foot down when he chose.

And so it chanced that Blank was retained in college and that the Harvard Washington Corps, which he commanded, presented arms, at the proper time and in the proper way to the President of the United States.

And so it happened that, fifty years after Harvard University received a very important and very expensive new building from an alumnus who on that day commanded the Harvard Washington Corps.

LA Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by Hood & Grantham.

Like Vance's Catfish.

A Wilkes county man whose whiskey was recently seized by revenue men complains that it shrunk 213 gal. while in their custody. A careless accusation like that is likely to cause trouble. It requires embarrassing explanations. The suspicion that they sold it is actually cruel while a suggestion that they drank it brings into controversy the question of a "revenue's" capacity for putting it away. There is an occasional one reported as carrying tangle of abnormal proportions, but the fellow who got outside of 213 gallons of Wilkes county whiskey and lived afterward has certainly established a new record.—Winston Journal.

What He Was There For.

There is at least one court in the world, an English Midland assizes, the judge of which is not afraid to say that black is black. The Birmingham Post gives the following glimpse of his method of dealing out justice:

A respectable-looking man was in the court in the autumn session. The charge was theft. The aggregate value involved was considerable, and the plea was guilty, but it was alleged that there were extenuating circumstances.

The defense introduced a medical expert to testify for the prisoner. He said that the self-confessed thief had kleptomania.

"What's that?" asked the judge gravely.
"Er—it's—er—a disease, my lord," said the astonished expert.

"What kind of a disease?" asked the judge.
"Well, it's a—er—a mental disease that causes the subject to appropriate property not his own," stammered the physician.

"Makes him steal?" asked the judge.
"Yes, my lord" that is generally the effect."

"I know the disease," said his honor, a grim smile in his eyes. "I know the disease, and I am sent here to cure it."—Selected.
