The procession marched to the cemetery, where a little boy and a little girl drew the veil from the beautiful shaft of granite, erected to the memory of our Confederate dead. As the veil fell, the Dunn Band played the inspiring strains of "Dixie." that grand old Southern melody, which will never grow old until our love for our beautiful southland shall cease to exist.

The Hon, Henry Blount delivered the address in his usual beautiful style, and spoke touchingly of the memory of those brave heroes who gave their lives for the protection of their homes and firesides.

It was a grand occasion for Wilson, and the many visitors to the city were made to feel that their welcome was strong and cordial. The hospitality of the Southland has become proverbial.
