GOVERNOR'S MANSION.

on, in its present unfinished condition. While I am a great advocate of econdmy in all departments of government, this suggestion strikes me as the most unwise that could possibly be made, under the present circumstances, in North Carolina.

It may be, that the authorities, who first adopted the plan for the building failed to exercise good judgment, and made plans for more than the Governor

veniences, but there is something about its massive solidity characteristic of a State, styled in ridicule "Rip Van Winkle;" because, like the rocks of which her State House is built, she stands fast to her principles of conservatism, and equally fast in the affections of her

Those, who can look back a few years, (sad to think how seldom you find a man with a memory of ten years ago), recalls the old mansion, so-called. "A disgrace to us all." gestion, that those proposing a sale, do so, in order to gain popularity, because they must know our people so well, as to be assured, that, above all things, they are a business people, and have so motive of seeing their property, gained by years of labor, sacrificed foolishly.

It would, if sold, be an everlasting disgrace to us all. All visitors to our beautiful capital city, would be an interested to the grace to us all. All visitors to our beautiful capital city, would be pointed to the "Governor's Mansion" which we tried to build, without having first "counted the cost," and then abandoned, and conveyed to Mr. —, for a small part of its value, very much to the gratification of the aforesaid Mr. —, but to the mortification of all other good people.

extravagant. All that time he was president of the Marine Bank of New York, a substantial institution. He became an easy victim to Ferdinand Ward, who applied to him for large discounts, offering heavy interest, but with the apparently more security of the influence of the family of ex-President Grant. The history of those times shows that the influences weighed little in financial circles, to uphold securities intrinsically worthless. The bank collapsed, and the fortunes of the Grant family were securities. Grant family were swept away. Pish was tried and convicted for his participation in the week, which involved not only the bank of which he was president, but the private fortunes of a man so con-

but the private fortunes of a man so conspicuous and so much idolized as Gen. Grant, and the public was pleased that a victim to its indignation was offered up. But James D. Pish was once known to the North Carolina public in a different relation. By virtue of the bill introduced at the extra session of the Legislature of North Carolina, to provide for the sale of the State's interest in the Western North Carolina Railway, by virtue of proporsitions for purchase made by certain parties to the State, several commissions designated by the Legislature and directed to convey to William J. Best, William R. Grace, James D. Pish and J. Nelson Tappan, all the rights and interests of the State in the railroad, under conditions specified in the hill. The conditions were accepted. But all receded from the contract in a few months, except Best. He, after many struggles to observe the conditions, at length, under terms not necessary here to recall, conveyed the property to the Richmond & Danville Railroad Company.

This was the beginning of that change.

Down on the Glue Man. . Editor .- Having fallen a victi

to the insinuating glue fiend, I thought I would ask you to warn the good citizens to beware of time and save their dimes for some better purpose. On hear-ing the door bell ring impatiently, the other day, I answered in person, and saw a seedy looking individual—holding small idles. As he had an expression persuasion on his countenance peculiar to peddlers and agents, I at once told him I was very, very busy, and really had no time to spare, etc., but alas! there was no escape. He undid his packages of glue so rapidly (small squares of con-solidated stuff), in the meantime talking so fast, telling me what miraculous glue it was, that it would stick anything to anything, be it of wood, china, glass or paper; also, gluing papers together before my eyes, which most surely did stick-Borroz Crrizzz:—If one may judge on your recent editorial, there is a discission, on the part of a portion of our w-makers, to sell the Governor's Mancon, in its present unfinished condition. While I am a great advocate of economy in all departments of government, its suggestion strikes me as the most rewise that could possibly be made, and the present circumstances, in North other ways, but will no avail, nothing ther ways, but will no avail, nothing could persuade it to stick—the glue was a fraud, and much to my chagrin (for where is the woman who likes to acknow-ledge herself sold? made plans for more than the Governor may at all times require; but if so, it is too late to reconsider their action. No one doubts their entire good faith—and for one, I do not question their wisdom.

The State House has always impressed me as being peculiarly well-adapted to our State. Many of its offices, might be improved by modern ideas and conveniences, but there is something about the south-in the and was one of the most popular men in the service of the Express Company. In 1868 he was appointed division superintendent of the Southern Express Com-pany, for the Eastern division, and he filled that office most acceptably until 1883, when he was compelled to resign upon account of failing health. He had a very wide acquaintance, and the news of his death will be read with sorrow not only throughout the Carolinas, but Information is given by the New York World, that the President of the United States has commuted the punishment of James D. Pish, sentenced to a term of ten years in the New York State prison, to five years and six months. The clemency is extended on account of the age of the prisoner, and growing infirmities of mind as well as body.

The history of the prisoner is a curious one. He is now sixty-nine yearsoid. Up to the death of his wife, which occurred in extreme propriety and respectability. After that event, his habits and his nature underwent a total revolution. He became a man about town, engaging in all the loose pleasures and questionable amusements of the younger generation. He played faro, and was exceptionally extrawagant. All that time he was president of the Marine Bank of New York.
