O, could there in this world be found
Some little spot of happy ground
Where village pleasures might be found
Without the village haunting?
How doubtful bliss that spot would be,
Where all might dwell in liberty,
Free from the bitter misery
Of gossip's meddling prying!

If such a spot were really known,
Fair Peace might claim it as her own,
And in its shade might sit her throne
Forever and forever;
There like a queen might reign and sit,
While every one would soon forgive
The little slights they might receive,
And be offended never.

The mischief makers that remove
Far from our hearts the warmth of love,
And lead us all to disapprove
What gives another pleasure,
They seem to take our part, but when
They've heard our ears, unkindly then
They soon retail them all again.
Mixed with their poisonous measure.

And then they're such a cunning way
Of using honest words, they say
"Don't mention what I've said, I pray;
I would not tell another."
Straight to your neighbor's house they go,
Narrating everything they know,
And break the peace of high and low,
Wife, husband, friend and brother.

O, that the mischief making crew
Were all reduced to one or two,
And they were painted red or blue.
That every one might know them
Then send our prayers for
To ease and quiet, peace and rest,
Or fall into an angry pet
With things so much below them.

PHYSICAL CULTURE FOR LADIES.
I have been somewhat surprised during my stay in Kansas City, to see how little interest is taken by the ladies in physical culture, which in the larger cities of the east forms such an important part of a girl's education nowadays. The old idea that a woman is man's inferior physically, is pretty well exploded since the proper sort of physical training has been made available for women. In point of fact, I believe the reverse is true as far as mere strength of muscle and limb is concerned. In one of my classes in Boston, I had a pupil, Miss Annie Le Castron, who, while hardly able to lift a ten pound dumb bell when she first began to practice, by constant training became able to handle heavier weights than most men can. In Berlin another pupil of mine, Miss Bertha Wurtner, in a class exhibition carried off the first honors for all round athletic work, winding up by defeating seven contestants in a live mile walk. There are great possibilities for women in such a course of training.—Professor in Kansas City Journal.

AN IMPROVEMENT IN PROPPELLERS.
One of the great difficulties encountered in the ordinary screw propeller in use is the liability to be thrown clear of the water by the pitching of the vessel in a heavy sea, thereby rocking and wrenching the machinery, and the ease with which it becomes disabled by fouling with cables or by striking any heavy floating object. A Scotch mechanic, however, has invented a method of placing the propeller, which entirely does away with both of these objections. At the stern of an ordinary vessel the keel is divided into two sections, leaving a space wherein the propeller is placed. Shafts are left in the sections of the double keel, through which the water may readily pass. By the working model of this invention it has been demonstrated that much greater forward speed can be secured with no greater expenditure of power, while the speed in going astern is fully equal to that secured in moving ahead.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Substitute for Coffee.
The Paris correspondent of The Glasgow Mail writes of the discovery of an extraordinary nature made in the island of Reunion which threatens to make havoc of the coffee trade. It is said that a plant called the wild orange grows on the island. It produces a fruit which is green at first and at forward bluish, verging into purple as it ripens. Hitherto the product of the plant has not attracted any particular notice in a commercial sense, but it has recently been tested and found to possess qualities which will render it an admirable substitute for coffee, the use of which will place within the reach of those who hitherto have not been well able to afford the high prices which in many places are asked for good coffee a beverage which will be in every way the equal of the latter. The government of the colony is said to have the matter in hand, and about 24,000 acres in the highest portion of the island are now under cultivation for the growth of the "wild oranges."

Cautious Signals.
Everybody is superstitious to a greater or less extent. Every man has a superstition of some sort, though they will not own it. One of the most common of the petty superstitions is involved in the answering of invitations. Some men do not hesitate to write positively that they will be there, but the great majority modify this by saying, "God willing," or "if nothing happens," or something of the sort. These men firmly believe in the old saying that "Man proposes and God disposes," and they are taking no chances. Those who have occasion to receive responses to invitations will notice that these "cautious signals" prevail.—Chicago Herald.

An Amphibious Siphoner.
There is a maiden lady in a city not far from Elberton who is so constituted that she cannot live out of water but a short while at a time. After remaining away from a bath tub for a couple of hours she commences to faint and almost suffocate, and to prevent this she must have cover her cuticle body in cold water. She has in her room a pool of fresh water, and in this she spends a greater part of her time, both winter and summer. Otherwise her health is very good.—Savannah News.

Grocer—What kind of tea will you have, madam?
"Black, I suppose, as 'm in mourning."

No sensible man prefers wealth to health. Some few have both; very many haven't neither. Well, you may choose first choice. Which will you take? "Health." Very well; what's your ailment? "A little of everything." What's the cause? "Blood out of order, kidneys weak, digestion bad, heart's action irregular." Yes, and every disease can be traced to these same sources. Just take a few bottles of Acker's Blood Bitters, it will remove the cause of disease and restore you to robust health.

The Rector—"I can't get the clasp of the hymnal open, Mr. Raglets."
The Sexton (diving into his pockets)—Try this, sir.

Merit Wins.
We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits.
F. L. Jacobs, Druggist.

Anecdotes of General Grant.
General Grant, on his return to this country, is said to have been severely afflicted with a cough contracted while crossing the ocean, and which had stubbornly refused to yield to any treatment. A friend procured for him a bottle of Symphax, and by its use in a few hours he was entirely relieved. He remarked to his friend: "Men look upon me as a great soldier, but this bottle of Symphax is greater than I. My calling has been to destroy men's lives, but this medicine is a victorious savior of men. I shall never be without it again." d1w

A Famous Trick.
They were all Boston boys, and neighbors, playmates and constant comrades. Appleton was a man of remarkable wit and quaint originality, with strong literary and artistic tastes, which, however, did not reach the point of high creative power. A sybaritic temperament, favored by prosperous circumstances, held him attituded all his life within the conservative circle of the most delightful social companionship, in which the wonder was that the latent forces of his nature took no definite and enduring form, so that "Tom Appleton" remains only a marvelous memory, a man tenderly beloved in life, and now affectionately remembered.

But in him, as in the others, were the stern old Puritan conscience and truthfulness, a scorn of dishonor and indifference, yet blended with such vivacity and accomplishment, such grace of mind and rectitude of life and delight in refined enjoyment, that in no other group of men in New England probably, were the characteristics and engaging qualities of Puritan and Cavalier more happily combined. Their careers were widely severed, although Boston was always their home. Phillips passed on to the renown of a great orator and leader in one of the noblest causes in history; Motley won the highest laurels of literature in the works which record the defense and development of liberty in Holland; Appleton placidly drifting with the current of his time, watched with the keenest interest and admiration the cause of both, and if perhaps he sometimes felt, with Browning's Pictor Ignotus,

I could have painted pictures like that youth's
Tom please so

there was no hint in word or manner that he regretted any prize he had not won. Long after the college days, and after Motley's first unprosperous literary ventures and his diligent study in Europe, he sent Appleton the sheets of his "History of the Dutch Republic." Appleton received them in Newport, where he read them with delight, and one morning, bursting into the room of a friend, he exclaimed, with a rapturous enthusiasm, "I've read it all, and; by Jove, Motley has done it at last!"—George William Curtis in Harper's Magazine.

Sound Sleepers.
Mr. Boyle says that it is one of the amusements of West Africa to show strangers how a Fantee boy can sleep. A friend of his wishing to rouse some servants and send them to close the shutters and lock the doors, said to him, "I'll show you something which you wouldn't believe on hearsay."
Thereon he grasped a boy by the heels, dragged him a yard or so, turned him over, and roughly lifted him to a sitting posture; the youth sat up, rubbed his eyes, scratched his head, and went to sleep again as he lay. To another he did the same, with a like result.

Having thus got the two alongside, fast asleep, he dragged one on top of the other, and left them a moment; they slumbered placidly in that position. He then ran snatched at them, being in slippers, and upset the pair, and ordered them loudly to close the shutters. They both got up, eyes wide open, and apparently conscious; one walked gravely down stairs, the other retired, with all semblance of reason, to the pantry alongside.

The one who went down came up again in two minutes, still with his eyes wide open, and leisurely lay down to sleep again; the other was found fast snoring in the pantry on a stool. We took them up, and shook them violently; they rubbed themselves, and went to sleep again.

Dragging them into the dining room, without a word, they silently set about their work, fastening shutters and doors.
"Do you think they are awake?" asked my friend. "Tell them to get up something."
I did so, in response. I repeated the order. They quietly went back, their work completed, and dropped to sleep upon their mats, fast stupefied with sleep all the time.—Youth's Companion.

Natural Gas in Indiana.
Some idea of the vast importance of the natural gas interests of Indiana may be gained from a study of the report recently made by the state geologist. He has been collecting all the information he could possibly get concerning the subject, and from the results of his investigation we learn that the gas area of Indiana is 165 miles in length by 65 miles in width; altogether there are 381 paying wells in the district. The entire flow of gas is placed at 600,000,000 feet of which, it is calculated, something like 1,000,000 feet go to waste. The average flow of gas from each well is stated as being about 150,000 feet. The report further mentions the fact that during the past two years seventy-nine manufactories have located in Indiana, simply and solely because of the fact that they could obtain this fuel. Their combined capital is stated, in Fire and Water, as reaching $4,500,000, and it is said that they will employ 3,800 men.—Scientific American.

Strangulation Produces Coloration.
The question is asked why the face of a person who is strangled turns black? An answer to this is as follows: Blood is of two kinds, arterial or bright blood, and venous or dark blood. The brilliant color of the arterial blood is due to oxygen which it carries from the lungs to the tissues; these rob it of its charge, and it buries back to the lungs as dark venous blood for more. If this regular course of nature is arrested by strangulation, which means the compression of the jugular vein, the venous blood is retained above the ligature and becomes less and less oxygenated. If the ligature is very tight the carotid arteries will also be blocked, and no more arterial blood will reach the head and face. And so the result of strangulation is blackness, or rather purpleness, of the face—the outcome of an excess of venous blood and deficiency of oxygenation.—New York Telegram.

Blair Furniture Company.
A boy carrying a large bouquet of roses, some pinks, heliotrope and pinks entered a Cottage Grove avenue car yesterday. Among the passengers inside was a little girl of possibly 8 years of age. The little one was as pretty a blondinette as one can see, and her woeen dress, spotlessly white, set off her juvenile beauty perfectly. Everybody was admiring the child. No sooner had the flower boy entered than the car was filled with the perfume of the roses and heliotrope. The little girl soon discovered it and quickly gave up her observation from the car window. She approached her mother and began teasing for some of the flowers. Finally when she found out that her mother could not procure any of the much wished for roses the child went right up to the boy.

A HAPPY TRYST.
With hedge the miller's daughter,
While song birds were a-wing,
I wandered 'mid the waiting courts,
And down the country hills I strayed
The yellow sunlight's tinge,
And O! the gray old world looked bright
As we walked side by side.

With arms around her limousie waist,
I whisper'd words endearing;
And sweet and low her answer came—
Alone too low for hearing;
And hide and seek the frolic went;
Play'd 'mid the rustling corn;
And O! our hearts with love were full
On that fair summer morn.

But ah, love's wings are very fleet,
And sweetest hours have ending;
Too soon we heard the old mill's sails
Booming their labor ending;
Too long before we left the corn
My gentle hedge I left,
And O! we thought us tamed sheaves
Had never hid happier tryst.
—Alman Lent Smith

THEIR DEATHS FORETOLD BY A GHOST.
Robert Withers, M. A. Vicar of Gately, England, in 1706, relates, in a publication of that time, the following singular story of the supernatural:
"Mr. Grose went to see Mr. Shaw on the 2nd of August last. As they were talking in the evening Mr. Shaw says: 'On the 21st of last month, as I was smoking a pipe and reading in my study, between eleven and twelve o'clock at night, in comes Mr. Naylor (formerly fellow of St. John's College, but who had been dead for four years). When I saw him I was not much frightened, and I asked him to sit down, which, accordingly, he did for about two hours, and we talked together. I asked him how it fared with him. He said: 'Very well. Were any of our old acquaintances with him?' 'No' (at which I was very much alarmed), 'but Mr. Orchard will be with me very soon, and you not long after.' As he was going away I asked him if he would stay a little longer, but he refused. 'No, he had but three days' leave of absence, and he had other business.'
"Mr. Orchard died soon after. Mr. Shaw is now dead. He was formerly fellow of St. John's College—an ingenious, good man. I knew him in; but at his death he had a college living at Oxfordshire, and here he saw the apparition."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Disinterested Friend.
The man who never owned a dog doesn't know what it is to have a devoted and disinterested friend. Do you know any creature half so faithful as old Gip, or Nero, or Bruno, or Fido, or Towser, or Bull-dog? When young you mistreated him dreadfully. You rode on his back, you pulled his ears, you twisted his tail, you kicked him and cuffied him. But he bore your abuse patiently and was always ready to lick the hand that smote him. He bore no grudge against you, but forgave and forgave everything. When you left home he was the last one of the family to say good-by; when you returned he was the first to give you greeting. In youth he was your comforter and protector; now he is your companion and friend.

Blair Furniture Company.
A boy carrying a large bouquet of roses, some pinks, heliotrope and pinks entered a Cottage Grove avenue car yesterday. Among the passengers inside was a little girl of possibly 8 years of age. The little one was as pretty a blondinette as one can see, and her woeen dress, spotlessly white, set off her juvenile beauty perfectly. Everybody was admiring the child. No sooner had the flower boy entered than the car was filled with the perfume of the roses and heliotrope. The little girl soon discovered it and quickly gave up her observation from the car window. She approached her mother and began teasing for some of the flowers. Finally when she found out that her mother could not procure any of the much wished for roses the child went right up to the boy.

PROTECTING PROPERTY OWNERS.
THE "CAMARET" GUARANTEED ROOFING PLATES.
We not only give the purchaser the best Roofing Plates, but we protect him—
First—By giving our guarantee.
Second—By stamping each sheet with brand and thickness.
Third—By excluding wastes.
Fourth—By branding the net weight of the 112 sheets on the box.
For the benefit of those wanting the very best Roofing Plates, we assert, and are PREPARED TO PROVE, that (excepting the "Gilbertson's Old Method") there are no other brands of roofing tin being offered in the market to-day, by any firm, under the four different guarantees given above by this house.

TRUSTEE'S SALE.
By virtue of a deed of trust executed to me by A. B. Warr and wife, dated February 7, 1888, and duly registered in Book 12, Page 218, to secure the payment of certain notes mentioned therein, I will sell at public auction for one-half cash and balance in six months, on the premises or at the court house in Asheville, N. C., on Wednesday, March 20, 1889, the property described in said trust, said property being situated in the City of Asheville, on French Broad Avenue and William Street, adjoining lands of W. M. Coker, Jr., and Messrs. Baird and Alexander; containing two acres more or less with three dwelling houses and other improvements. This the 18th day of February, 1889.
ISIDOR WALLACH,
Trustee.

NOTICE.
By virtue of a decree of the Superior Court of Buncombe county, rendered at the Decree Term, 1888, I will, on the 4th day of April, 1889, at the residence of T. J. Vandilder on College street, in the city of Asheville, sell at public auction for cash, to the highest bidder, all the furniture and chattels, conveyed by T
