

THE DAILY CITIZEN.
 The Citizen is the most extensively circulated and widely read newspaper in Western North Carolina.
 Its discussion of public men and measures is in the interest of public integrity, honest government, and prosperous industry, and it knows no personal allegiance in treating public issues.
 The Citizen publishes the dispatches of the Associated Press, which now covers the whole world in its scope. It has other facilities of advanced journalism for gathering news from all quarters, with the smallest expenses, and it publishes the material carefully edited to occupy the earliest space.
 Specimen copies of any edition will be sent free to any one sending the address.
 Terms—Daily, 5¢ for one year; $3 for six months; 50 cents for one month; 15 cents for one week. Carriers will deliver the paper in every part of the city to subscribers, and particulars will please call at the Citizen's office.
ADVERTISEMENTS—Reasonable, and made known on application at this office. All transient advertisements must be paid in advance.

OUR IDEAL OF JOURNALISM.
 When THE CITIZEN in December last announced a change in its ownership and management, it promised its patrons that they should not be annoyed by personal matters of any one connected with it, and it remembers its promise. It is a matter of absolute indifference to us what is said or thought of us by Mr. B. or any one else, who is writing the criticisms which, we are told, fill the columns of the Evening Journal, and we are sure that our readers are as little interested as we are.
 We acknowledge that we were grieved when we heard that a gentleman who had been our friend was the real editor of this paper, but with that all interest whatever, on our part, ended.

In our editorial deprecating municipal elections being on strict party grounds we based our views on the reason that bitter feelings would arise between friends of years, and our fear seems likely to be realized.
 Our ideal journalist holds a kind of fiduciary position between his patrons, his subscribers on the one hand, and his advertisers on the other. To do justice to the latter he must keep up his circulation and reach as many readers as possible, and this can only be done by furnishing them such matters of news as will interest, amuse and benefit them.

THE CITIZEN, with its readers scattered from Oregon to Florida, from Mexico to Maine, and an occasional one even across the water, realizes that if their patronage is to be retained and their numbers increased in the ratio that has been the rule thus far, it must sink self and selfish discussions. It must devote its pages to news, general and local, in short, it must make itself worth what these kind friends pay for it, or otherwise it can claim no raison d'être. It must base its claims to popular favor absolutely on a business view of the situation. No one can be asked to pay for it unless it gives them value received for their money. Again, no one can be asked to advertise in its columns unless they can be assured that their advertisements will reach the eye of an ever increasing number of readers.

This is our ideal, in part, of the duty of a journalist. His readers at home must be supplied with the latest foreign telegraphic news. His readers abroad may be expected to be more interested in its local. But this must be of a proper kind.
 Such, for instance, as we gave yesterday, showing the building interests of Asheville, and the efforts being made to secure further railroad facilities, rather than have its columns crowded with predictions of Monday's election, which it feels no sure is going for the citizens' ticket as to make it needless to comment farther on it. A continual repetition of these predictions indicates doubt, of which we have not the least bit, because we know our people will prefer to trust their important business to Messrs. Blanton and Leonard. But our readers do not care to have the same thing sung in their ears day after day, like the monotonous droning of a swarm of locusts; having said it once, we rest it there, and go off to some new subject of which we will ever have an abundant supply, such for instance as the proposed railroad to Tennessee.

THE CITIZEN is an ardent advocate of railroads. It has no reason to be otherwise. Reflecting upon the condition of our town and city a few years ago, and comparing it with the present wonderful prosperity which faces us on all sides, we cannot fail to thank the Richmond & Danville syndicate, which, cured by others, by us is ever blessed as the means of bringing us this prosperity.
 Holding this opinion, we undertook a most fatiguing journey, over bad roads, through rain and mud, with the hope that we might be allowed to add our mite to increasing our facilities. People said "why what good will it do? Don't you know the R. & D. will gobble it up as soon as built." Let them gobble, say we. We don't want any better lines than the R. & D. will give us, and we wish to help them, to encourage them, by all our power to extend the same benefits to other portions of this county and to Yancey county. It was said to see these good people wading their substance, hauling their produce in wagons, the transportation costing nearly as much as the produce is worth, and for their sake we would labor for this railroad extension, and are delighted at the prospect of its early accomplishment.

PRACTICAL UNITY.
 As in the war of the Revolution the soldiers of Massachusetts stood shoulder to shoulder with the men of Georgia, so in the recent magnificent display just had in New York we find the same expression of unity, except that the extreme wings had wider extension and embraced wider expanse of territory, for on the one hand Maine, and on the other Texas had been added representing the utmost reach on either hand to the boundary limits of foreign contact. But the conditions of this last fraternal association were antipodal to those of the first. In this the men of the widely separated colonies closed up to each other to gather strength for the common struggle in which they were engaged, to shed their blood, and lay down their lives, and all for liberty and a new free nationality. In the latter fraternity of the soldiers, the gathering was to prove in most splendid demonstration that the first had made good their promises, that liberty had been achieved, that a new nation had been created, and that now at the end of one hundred years, it stood united, its people in cordial brotherhood, its soldiers still shoulder to shoulder in the rivalries of peace, as one in the enthusiasm or sacrifices of common defence.

Such a spectacle the world has never before witnessed, this gathering of a volunteer soldiery, eagerly pressing forward from the remotest parts of this grand free empire to participate in the sublime tribute to the efficiency of a system which devised a government "of the people, by the people and for the people" happily proud to be the best fruit of human wisdom and virtue, to secure human happiness and prosperity. If there have been departures, and many such must be admitted of subjects for the action and solicitude of government, for the effect of enormous increase of population and for its mixed elements, for the fabulous increase of prosperity and attendant wealth, and therefore inevitable change of habits and manners, for the vast extension of commerce and new methods of transacting its operations, for the introduction of modern agencies of transportation and correspondence, all of which have quickened the popular brain, stimulated all energies and revolutionized all former modes of thought and action. Yet all this change is due to the principles of government under which we live and through whose influence these things came into being. And this is so well recognized by our people as to insure stability in spite of laxity of public virtue and in spite of apparent irreverence for the past. But the sound common sense of Americans hold prudent regard for the foundation, whatever liberties they may take with the superstructure. And when they gather as they do, with the exultant enthusiasm to celebrate with joy, and also with solemn ceremonial, the occurrence of some signal event in their history we may be sure the popular heart and mind are both right whatever of giddi-ness or levity may be displayed in the interval.

The unity of the soldiery is binding proof of a harmony, a community of feeling and interest, a purpose to secure and defend our great and common country and give the strongest guarantee that men can give, that in common danger the soldiers of all sections will stand to the end as they did in the beginning, to the defence of the common welfare.

BALL ROOM SCENES.
 The New York Sun's description of the grand centennial ball presents a most disgraceful picture. Half drunken young men staggered through the ball room, with bottles in one hand and glasses in the other, drinking themselves, and accosted unknown ladies with impertinent invitations to join them. A body of Federal troops was required to make way for the President, the crush was so great that nobody could enjoy dancing and towards the latter part of the evening the police took entire charge, closing up the wine room, driving out its inmates and pushing back from the doors the throngs, including the committeeman Stuyvesant Fish, and causing general consternation among the ladies' 'nose trains and costumes suffered severely.
 Many persons anticipating the closing of the wine room at 1 o'clock, had secured bottles, the contents of which were boisterously consumed in every part of the ball room.
 The utmost confusion prevailed while the guests were waiting to leave, hours being consumed in getting hats and coats, and the waiters seizing the opportunity to exact fees. The lights began to be extinguished before the crowd dispersed. The police finally forced people out of the house, declaring "we are tired of all this fuss." It is said there were several thousand persons who got in without tickets, and one among them was recognized as a crack. He was accompanied by a female.

President Hickman of the Southern Cotton Manufacturers' Association, in his speech sounded the subsidy howl as the only salvation for our commerce and the revival of our shipping interests. If it was possible to make any impression by an appeal to common sense upon people who are once infected with the subsidy craze we would venture to call President Hickman's attention to the antiquated and nonsensical navigation laws of this country, which practically forbid American merchants from buying and owning their own ships or profitably employing American seamen, and to the absolute impossibility of any country commanding foreign markets when the laws of the country are framed for the express purpose of prohibiting the exchange of commodities. Have they not the assurance of northern protectionists that the home market is all sufficient. Let them satisfy themselves with that assurance since many of them seem to believe it.
 The howl for subsidy is a direct attack upon the marvellous automatic, stem-winding, self-acting system of protection invention. It is only the visionary evolutionist who seeks to dispose of his goods outside of the charmed home circle.

Dr. Parker Prays cream Van-Ola, Rosa-line, Ungaline and Diamond nail powder having now become the ladies' favorites, at F. L. Jacob's drug store, these popular manure articles may always be found, together with pocket mirror, orange wood sticks, nail scissors, files and other such requisites. Also a complete line of drugs and toilet articles, in addition to the Hebe Soda Fountain from which ice cold drinks are dispensed. Corner Main street and Patton avenue.
