

THE TESTIMONY ALL IN

AND ARGUMENT BY COUNSEL OPENED YESTERDAY.

In the Tedious and Monotonous Murder Case in Which Police-men W. S. Bradley and J. W. Donovan are Defendants.

After an entire day of much needed rest and recuperation, judge, jury and attorneys seemed greatly refreshed when the fourth day's trial of policemen Bradley and Donovan was called in the criminal court yesterday morning.

The jury, in charge of officer Green, entered the box a few minutes after ten o'clock, and the investigation of a number of witnesses as to the general character of the accused was begun. John Brookshire, W. P. Penley, Jesse R. Starnes, J. L. Buchanan, all swore that, so far as they knew, the character of Donovan was "good."

Ex-police officers Chas. J. Harkins and J. M. Rowan and Frank Howell did not agree with the witnesses who preceded them, and consequently they testified that Donovan's character was "bad," ex-officer Harkins stating that the defendant's general character for lying was bad, and that he had heard policemen say they would not arrest a man upon Donovan's allegation.

John Maxwell testified that he knew James Ripley, and knew that Ripley's character was good. (Ripley is an uncle to Duffy, the man who was shot by officer Bradley.)

Robert Ball, George Justice, Jr., Ham Baker, Joe Hudson and W. A. Campbell all testified to certain things they had seen or heard in conversation with Donovan, or at the trial of Mollie Duffy in the police court—none of which testimony affected the status of the case one way or another.

At the conclusion of Howell's testimony the argument before the jury was opened by Mr. Henry Hardwick for the prosecution. He spoke a little over two hours, and was replied to by Mr. W. W. Jones, of counsel for the defense, in one of the clearest, learned legal arguments ever made in the court house of Buncombe in a murder trial. Mr. Jones' familiarity with the criminal law, both of England and America, strengthened and sustained in every assertion by reference to precedents which he seemed to have at his tongue's end; his smooth and pleasing and courtly address, coupled with argument incisive and convincing; his absolute freedom from invective, so foolishly and disgustingly indulged in by not a few members of the legal fraternity; all combined to make Mr. Jones' address to the jury one that reflected great credit upon the very able gentleman and astute lawyer that he is.

At the conclusion of his speech, Judge Moore adjourned the court until ten o'clock this morning, when Col. V. S. Lusk will speak for the prosecution. Col. Lusk will be replied to by city attorney Cobb, of counsel for the defense, who will in turn, be replied to by Solicitor Carter.

And thus another splendid forensic battle will be waged to-day—a war of words framed in eloquence and learning—a war, whose victory means the acquittal or conviction of two men charged with crime most foul—men, who wait with bated breath the verdict of their countrymen. Fiat justitia.

EUROPEAN LETTERS

By "The Citizen's" Special Correspondent, Etc.

It has been generally known that a party of tourists, principally teachers, under the guidance of Mr. Eugene G. Harrell, of Raleigh, would visit Great Britain and France during the months of July and August; and realizing the advantage that would be enjoyed by any one who had the good fortune to accompany this delightful excursion, and desirous of supplying their friends at home with the very latest intelligence of their movements and welfare, this paper has arranged to have its special correspondent as one of their number.

It will be our endeavor to lay before our readers as rapidly as the mail will bring them, letters which we hope will be of some public interest as describing the first impressions of a trans-Atlantic voyage, and of European life, manners, business and politics, as experienced by a man on his first visit, who is determined to keep eyes and ears wide open, and who will not be mortified if his correspondence shows him to be somewhat of a greenhorn. At the same time, we hope to make these letters so interesting to each member of this party and their friends, that they will consider THE CITIZEN worth preserving, as a memento of a most happy part of their lives.

It is further proposed that any item which is of sufficient interest to warrant it, shall be promptly forwarded to THE CITIZEN by cablegram. This will certainly be done to announce the safe landing of the party, which we understand is to be in Glasgow.

In this way the tourists will be enabled to avoid the expense of private messages by telegraph, by subscribing to THE CITIZEN for the two months of July and August, and which will cost only the insignificant sum of one dollar to each subscriber.

A Good Walker.

In the course of some reminiscences recalled by Gen. A. E. Jackson, of Jonesboro, Tenn., and related to a reporter of the Chattanooga Times, the General said of himself:

"I was a regular Indian for fleetness of foot and endurance. As an illustration, I walked from Asheville, N. C., to my home in Jonesboro, Tenn., and back, in one day."

WILL LEAVE ASHEVILLE.

Mr. E. Levy to Establish His Shoe Factory in Richmond, Va.

Mr. E. Levy and family leave on the 1.32 afternoon train for Richmond, Va., to-day, where in future they will reside.

Mr. Levy is one of Asheville's best known and most highly esteemed Hebrew residents, and during his twelve years stay here has made many friends who will sincerely regret his departure from the mountain city.

Until the recent sale of his clothing and shoe business to Graves & Thrash, Mr. Levy has been actively identified with the business interests of Asheville, and has made quite an enviable reputation by reason of his courteous treatment of patrons and fair and honest business methods.

At the time of his retirement Mr. Levy was one among the largest dealers in his special lines in the city, and his particular specialty, "Levy's $3 Shoe," had become almost as famous as the footwear manufactured by Douglas & Miller.

Mr. Levy contemplated the establishment of a large shoe factory in this city, and it was for the purpose of purchasing necessary machinery for the extensive manufacture of boots and shoes, that he made a recent and extended trip to Boston, Lynn and other New England cities. He purchased the machinery, but astonished a CITIZEN reporter yesterday with the announcement that the proposed shoe factory would be established in Richmond, Va., and not in Asheville.

Asked the reason for this change of base, by the reporter, Mr. Levy stated that it was purely a matter of financial support that induced the change from his original intention of building and locating his factory here. Richmond offered advantages, from a business point of view, that Asheville could not or did not offer, and as the outlay he had made necessitated some solid guarantee of patronage sufficient to successfully operate his concern, he could not, in justice to himself, do otherwise than seek the field that promised the greatest reward for the time, capital and labor he proposed to employ in this enterprise.

He told the reporter that he much disliked to leave Asheville; it was the best town he had ever lived in; he liked the people, and had many friends here to whom he greatly regretted to say "good-bye." He would always retain a kindly feeling of interest towards Asheville and her people, and would ever sincerely wish for the continued growth and upbuilding of both city and citizen.

THE CITIZEN regrets to give up Mr. Levy and his clever and interesting family, and wishes for each and all of them much success and prosperity.

BEFORE THE BAR.

CAPT. DAWSON'S MURDER ON TRIAL FOR HIS LIFE.

Witnesses Relate in Open Court What They Know Concerning the Cowardly Murder of a Brave Gentleman.

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 24.—This is just such a day as the day on which Capt. F. W. Dawson was buried, over three months ago. It is hot and raining and blowing for forty-eight hours; but neither the cold east winds nor the rain have kept the people in doors. Dr. T. R. Burgess and C. L. Lenoir, colored—five with the murder of Capt. Dawson. The court house is packed. There is not even a standing room left. All classes in the community are represented in the assemblage. A number of clergymen have secured seats at the bar and will sit through the case. When McDow entered the court room this morning he was somewhat nervous, but quickly recovered his self-possession and is looking on with as much apparent unconcern as any of the spectators.

A jury was formed without much delay. It is composed as follows: A. McCobb, George Butler, Arthur Middleton, P. G. McInnes and A. N. Prince, white; and R. S. Canlin, Alex. Sims, W. H. Burgess and C. L. Lenoir, colored—five white and seven colored men. McDow is represented by ex-Governor McGrath and Asher D. Cohen. The prosecution will be conducted by Solicitor Jervay and H. Smith. McDow objected to all the white men called except five, and selected seven negroes on the panel. The first witness called by the State was policeman Gordon to whom McDow surrendered himself three hours after the shooting. Gordon's statement was substantially the same as given before the coroner's jury. The case will probably not be concluded before Tuesday.

John Ficken and August Fitch, two well known citizens who rode in the street car with Dawson on the day of the murder, testified that they conversed with him pleasantly and cheerfully and saw no signs of irritation. He got off the car near his usual stopping place.

S. G. Gordon, a policeman, testified that he was near the scene of the murder, and that some one told him a pistol shot had been fired. He went to McDow's home and saw his wife and child hurrying out to the street. Then he went to McDow's office and knocked at the door. The door was slightly open and the witness saw a man's eye peeping at him. The door was closed and fastened a few moments later. Witness heard a noise in the office as if a man was hauling a bag of corn across the floor. Later on he saw McDow come out of office and go to a grocery on the corner. McDow's hat was soiled and bore marks of white wash. His coat was also dirty. McDow soon afterwards returned to his office, and then went to another part of the city, and returning about three hours later saw McDow drive out of the yard. McDow called him and gave himself up, saying that he had killed Capt. Dawson.

Dr. Michael, who made the post mortem examination, explained the nature of the wound. He stated that from the course of the ball the shot must have been fired from behind. He also testified that when he saw the body of the dead man he had on his gloves and had evidently been regularly laid out.

The coroner and deputy coroner testified to the investigation which led to the discovery of the attempt to conceal the body in a closet in rear of the office. All the effects and clothing of the deceased were put in evidence and identified; also the spade which the murderer had used to dig the grave. The blood-stained towel found in his office, and the blood-stained towel found in his office, and the blood-stained towel found in his office.

Policeman Fordham, colored, identified McDow's hat, showing the dent and white wash stains that it had received while he was digging the grave for Dawson's body.

This closed the testimony for the day, and the court adjourned till to-morrow morning.

SILENCING THE DONKEY.

Not so Much the Quadruped as the Biped, That we Object To.

I have no doubt that the donkey believes when braying, and, in consequence, is unable to do justice to the leavers with which he was propelling to favor the opportunity, and peace-reffalls upon the neighborhood—"Minn Among Animals," a the Chautauquan.

The post-prandial nap of THE CITIZEN has occasionally been disturbed, and its anti-profanity tendencies seriously interfered with by the dulcet tones of a donkey; but this annoyance is most worrying when the infuriating beast is at the apices biped. The pronunciation of the quadruped is more endurable, because his uses in the realm of nature are more readily recognizable than those of his two-legged kinsman.

Not being versed in this branch of the science of natural history, THE CITIZEN begs the advice of its learned correspondents, whether the same remedy should be applied to the Chautauquan, or whether the same remedy should be applied to the Chautauquan, or whether the same remedy should be applied to the Chautauquan.

To Elect Officers.

The members of Swannanoa Lodge, No. 2, O. E. S. of this city, will hold a meeting on their hall this evening for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year. The members are invited to meet promptly at eight o'clock.

Small Estate Transfers.

Small estates in the city of Asheville, N. C., will be transferred to the heirs of the deceased, whether the same remedy should be applied to the Chautauquan, or whether the same remedy should be applied to the Chautauquan, or whether the same remedy should be applied to the Chautauquan.

ELEANOR ANTOINETTE NIES.

The Sudden Death of a Bright Little Girl Yesterday Morning.

Jesus, Savior of my soul, Let me to thy bosom fly, While the waves of trouble roll, While the tempest still is high.

Never were these familiar words nearer to the hearts of sorrowing humanity than last evening, when sympathizing friends gathered around the stricken parents of dear little Eleanor Antoinette Nies, who entered into a new life on yesterday morning. The sweet little creature, with her winsome, childish ways, had enticed the hearts of all who saw her, and most heartily did we pray that the poor mother and father might be enabled to realize that "this mortal had put on immortality."

The remains of the little one, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Nies, were taken to New York for interment, on the 9:55 train last evening.

Mr. Nies is steward of the Commodore Club of this city, and the entrance to that building was draped in mourning colors all day yesterday.

The death was a premature and one, and the heartfelt sympathy of our people goes out to the heart-broken parents, whose joy and life has been marred and blighted by the untimely demise of one they so devotedly loved and fondly cherished.
