FRIDAY, JULY 12, 1889.

MRS. TYLER.

The death of the wife of ex-President Tyler, announced in yesterday morning's issue, recalls some reminiscences of a very stirring political period, and also a memorable tragedy with which Mrs. Tyler was distressingly associated. The campaign of 1840 was the most animated that had ever stirred up the enthusiasm or the passions of the American people.
The commotion swept along the whole country in its torrent of excitement, from the lordly rich down to the hardy tenants of the humble log cabin. The victory fell to the Harrison and Tyler ticket, Whig over Martin VanBuren, Democrat, seeking a second term. William H. Harrison, grandfather of the present President, died exactly one month after his brilliant and hopeful inauguration; and Vice-President John Tyler succeeded him. This was in 1845. Tyler soon proved himself unfaithful to the policy of the opposition, for the delivery from which the political battle had been fought so fiercely. The rage of disappointment was fearful, the scorn and contempt for the treachery unmeasured. Mr. Tyler, the first Vice-President who ever succeeded to power by the death of his superior officer, was known to the Whig party as the humiliating title of "His Accidency." Every member of the very able cabinet that Gen. Harrison had called around him resigned as soon as Mr. Tyler had revealed himself; all except Mr. Webster, who was deep in negotiation with Lord Ashburton on the treaty of that name for the settlement of the Maine and Oregon boundary question and other vexatious points of difference between the United States and Great Britain, serious menaces to international peace; and Mr. Webster retained his position until he and Lord Ashburton had agreed upon terms, which was some time in September, 1845.

Mr. Tyler came into office a poor man, and also a widower. His elevation to the Presidency giving him influence and distinction, also assured him a competent income; and he began to look about for a mistress for the White House. A President of the United States may find difficulty in making a choice for such a position; he has very little, when he has made one, in obtaining favorable response. He selected Miss Gardiner, daughter of a prominent lawyer of Long Island in the State of New York.

Not very long after the marriage, a pleasure excursion was projected down the Potomac river on the steamship of war Princeton, a novelty in marine architecture, the first war vessel to be fitted with the Ericsson propeller, and also supplied with several novelties in naval warfare; and the greatest novelty of all was the great gun, "the Peacemaker," the largest piece of ordnance that had ever been mounted on a ship's deck. It was a gala occasion. The President and all his cabinet came on board; naval officers of high rank, members of Congress, and a distinguished party of civilians. The ship ran down the river a score or two of miles, and all went on merrily and prosperously. The dinner hour came, and the party indulged in the usual hilarities and in the proud exultation of the success of the fine new national ship. One by one the guests left the table and went out on deck; a group which they joined, was crowded around the Peacemaker, which was about to be fired under the immediate supervision of Commodore Stockton, we believe. The lanyard was pulled and a terrific explosion followed; and followed, and accompanied by cries of agony and horror. The huge gun had burst into fragments, and when the smoke cleared away, the deck was exposed covered with the dead and the dying, the wounded and debris of the shattered surroundings.
The fatality was awful, the victims of the highest rank. There was Abel P.
Uphur, secretary of the navy; Mr. Gilmer, attorney-general; Beverly Kennon, commodore in the navy; Virgil Maasey, whose rank we forget; and Mr. Gardiner, the father of Mrs. Tyler. The President had not left the dining table, and escaped harm. All those named were killed instantly. Others were wounded and perhaps several died, though our recollection does not include them. It may be imagined what a thrill of horror ran through the country at the tidings of such catastrophe. There was, accompanying the sorrow, a kind of malicious regret felt by many, that the President had not sooner finished his meal so that he might have been present at the disastrous trial of the Peacemaker.

THE NEWS AND COURIER SPEAKS.

The News and Courier, to which many looked, we have always thought improperly, for strong expressions of condemnation of the unrighteous verdict in the McDow trial, has at length broken its silence, impelled perhaps a little earlier than it would have done by the taunts, or rebukes, or imputations of journalists who should have been wiser and more considerate. Of all the journals, the News and Courier was in a position that compelled it to silence. By sympathy, by association, by the poignancy of its suffering, it could not speak impartially. If it spoke at all, it must have spoken through the usual channel of outraged human feeling. It must have spoken freely, and doing so, must have spoken with temper. It could not speak impartially, and its close relation to the murdered man, in view of the justice sought to be visited through the law upon the murderer, compelled the policy of silence rather than use of a power which must inevitably have been constructed to have been exerted directly to the arraignment of prejudice against the guilty man.

On this point the N. and C. says:
"The News and Courier kept silent after the murder of Capt. Dawson and before the trial of his slayer, because it did not intend that there should be the slightest ground for the charge that it had attempted in any way to shape the course of public opinion. The News and Courier has kept silent since the trial because it was well aware that, whatever views it expressed would be attributed to personal feeling and individual prejudice. It has preferred to await the judgment of the country and to set up against the verdict of the jury in the Court of sessions, the verdict of the larger jury of the country."

But having thus spoken, the N. C. does not descend to the plane of denunciation of the man who is, under the law, now a free man, who "will not be required to expiate his crime upon the gallows, and the halter of the hangman will not be drawn around his neck."
But it dwells with force and dignity upon the influence of so upright a verdict, one so oblivious to the obligations of the law and so recklessly regardless of the rights and safety of society, and also so deeply in its influence upon the reputation of the State.

We quote another paragraph which will have wider application than in Charleston.
"The verdict which was rendered in the Charleston Court House on June 29 does not in the least concern Capt. Dawson.
He is beyond the reach of human tribunals, of jury commissioners, of the machinery of courts, of the petty revenges of personal enemies, of the latter hatred of false friends. But it is a verdict that affects every man, woman and child in Charleston and South Carolina. It concerns the very civilization of the State.
It threatens the fair and impartial administration of justice. If it means anything, it means that that the guano in the supreme court in this State; that the law is the plighting of prejudice and passion; that the courts are established for the protection of criminals, not for the punishment of crime; that lust is a high moral attribute; and that the shedding of blood is a virtue."

And every right thinking man will concur in the following conclusion:
"If, however, the acquittal of Dr. Mc-Dow shall lead to the sterner enforcement of the law; if, for very shame, no guilty men shall hereafter escape; if the honest and respectable people of the State shall form an alliance for the preservation of the remnant of their boasted civilization; Capt. Dawson will not have lived and worked in vain, and his blood will not have been shed in vain."

EDITORIAL POINTS.

There ought to be, perhaps already is, a powerful reaction in the public sentiment, which ran so wild towards the brutal pugilists a few days ago when the two stand revealed in all their hideous brutality. They have made haste themselves to dispel the illusion. Sullivan, described by the Knoxville Journal as "a drunkard, a wife beater, a bully, a blackguard, a brute," steps out of the ring "the champion of the world," the idolized hero of the hour, in a few short hours "to return like a dog to his vomit," to wallow in the mire of his drunkenness, and to display himself before his worshippers, a Sampson shorn of his locks, an undisguised and unmitigated brute. Kilrain, to whom some sympathy was given, and to whom some trait of humanity was accorded, proves himself to have been worthy of neither, and to have presented himself among decent men under such condition of physical loathsomeness, that the clubs which welcomed him so enthusiastically, receiving him as a superior rather than an equal, are ready to clothe themselves with sack cloth and ashes that they had recognized such a creature. Such are the heroes that more than half the world worshipped a few days ago. The disenchantment ought to be complete, and lasting enough to destroy the taste and admiration for these pugilistic matches; for the material will never be more human or more admirable than presented by Kilrain and Sullivan.

After the recent developments of the true character of the pugilists, Kilrain and Sullivan, we think the determination of Gov. Lowry to vindicate the good name of his State, and the pluck of the Nashville police in making the arrest of Sullivan, will meet general approval.
American sympathies cannot attach to men fallen into such depths of degradation as both of them have done; and the more conspicuous their prowess was the other day, the more unfit they have proved themselves for the honors extended.

Those who drink New York water can not have very pleasant sensation when they find that the Central Park reservoir is becoming a favorite place for suicide by drowning, three men having drowned themselves there in the last three months.
They might protest vehemently against the practice; "no suicide in ourn."

Dr. Parker Prays cream Van-Ola, Rosa-line, Ongaline and Diamond nail powder having now become the ladies' favorites, at F. L. Jacob's drug store, these popular manicure articles may always be found, together with pocket emery board, or other such requisites. Also a complete line of drugs and toilet articles, in addition to the Hele Soda Fountain from which ice cold drinks are dispensed. Corner Main Street and Patton Avenue.

The name of Johnstown seems to carry calamity with it. Two towns of that name have been scourged by flood as scarcely ever towns were. Names will have to be changed, or the Jonah among them must be found and cast out.

All are entitled to the best that they money will buy, and every family should have, at once, a bottle of the best family remedy, Syrup of Figs, to cleanse the system when constipated or bilious. For sale in 50c. and $1.00 bottles at all leading druggists.

"GOODS GIVEN AWAY."
CHARLES BROADWAY ROUSE,
NEW YORK CITY.

July 9, 1889.

Geo. T. Jones, Esq., Asheville, N. C.: Dear Sir—Your esteemed favor of the 6th received and fully noted. Your ideas are correct; put a knife into your dry goods and close them out. We would suggest that you enlarge your Notion, Shoe, Hat and Furnishing departments. We have the facilities for supplying you with complete lines of Notions, Laces, Edgings, Ribbons, and Trimming Goods generally at such low figures and so much below their real values that you can defy any and all competition that may arise.

Awaiting your further appreciated commands, and trusting that you will roll the orders in, with best wishes, respectfully, C. B. ROUSS.

The letter as printed above explains itself and is authoritative. "Put the knife into your Dress Goods and close them out." In accordance with orders we are going to close them out at cost, below cost, in fact at your own prices so that they are turned into money. We enumerate some of the bargains we shall be prepared to offer on Monday, July 15, which will be as soon as we can get the goods marked down. We ask you to read the prices:

Lawn Dresses (not cheese cloth Lawn) GIVEN AWAY; Calico 3, 4, 5 and 6c. per yard, the very best Indigo Blue at 6c., usually sells at 8 and 9c., Danish Cloth at 10c., Challies at 5½ and 6c., sold at 7½ and 9c., Gingham 5½ to 10c., sold for 7½ to 12½c., Satinets (a new lot just opened) at 7½, 9 and 10c. We were going to sell them at 8½, 10 and 12½c. and they were splendid value at that.

Everything in our stock White Goods, is going to be sold, and at once, preparatory to putting in the large-est stock of Notions, Trimmings, Shoes, Hats, Clothing, Ladies and Men's Underwear, Furnishings and Housekeeping things generally that has ever been shown in Asheville.
We have a few pieces of very fine Henriettas and now is the time to buy all the Dress Goods that you will need for the next 12 months.

During our closing out sale of Dress Goods, as long as it lasts, we will give with every sale of a Dress amounting to One Dollar or over, 10 yards of our 5c. Lawn. We have about 3,000 yards to be thus given away. It can't last, so come soon if you would secure a Dress for nothing.

Our stock of all other lines of goods (already a big one) is to be largely increased, and we calculate as heretofore to lead in low prices on whatever we handle. It is hardly necessary for the "Racket" to say anything by way of explanation for this step. It involves a business change only. The "Bank of Asheville" can tell you whether necessity calls for it or not.

Come and get a Lawn Dress for nothing.

Respectfully,
